

KIN OF PRESIDENT OF MEXICO SHOT DEAD BY OFFICER AT ARDMORE, OK.

Emilio Cortes Rubio, 20, and Manuel Gomez, 22, Driving Home From College in Kansas, Killed by Deputy.

HE SAYS THEY DREW PISTOLS WHEN HALTED

Their Companion Explains That They Feared Holdup—Sheriff's Men Declare They Announced They Were Officers of Law.

By the Associated Press.

ARDMORE, Ok., June 8.—Two Mexican college students, one a son of a second cousin of President Ortiz Rubio of Mexico, were slain here early today by a Deputy Sheriff as they were driving home after their year's study in the United States. The victims were Emilio Cortes Rubio, 20 years old, and Manuel Gomez, 22, son of a prominent Mexican family.

A companion, Salvador Cortes Rubio, 24, cousin of the Mexican President, was not injured. Deputy Sheriff Bill Guess shot and killed the two youths after they had stopped their car on a highway. Guess and Deputy Sheriff Cecil Crosby said the boys drew pistols when they approached and that Guess fired when weapons were pointed at him.

Salvador Cortes Rubio, the survivor, said the youths had been followed by another car on their drive southward through Oklahoma and had feared a holdup.

Told Their Identity, Officers Say, Crosby declared he and Guess informed the youths at once that they were officers. No shots were fired by the students and Crosby said he did not shoot.

Salvador Cortes Rubio explained that he and his companions carried an assortment of weapons which they intended to take home, because firearms could be purchased more cheaply in the United States than in Mexico. They also had protection from robbers in mind, he said. The shooting occurred, he said, after he had walked away from the car.

The youths left St. Benedict's College at Atchison, Kan., early yesterday, after attending mass at the church there, to drive to Mexico. Fernando and Guillermo Ortiz Rubio, sons of the Mexican President and students at St. Benedict's, departed at the same time in another automobile for New York to meet their mother.

Emilio Cortes Rubio was graduated from St. Benedict's high school two years ago and, since then had been attending the Missouri School of Mines at Rolla, Mo., as an engineering student. Gomez was a sophomore in the engineering department at St. Benedict's. Salvador Cortes Rubio was graduated in chemical engineering at St. Benedict's College a few days ago and had been the mentor of the President's sons at the school.

Inquiry to Be Made.

Pending an inquiry by County Attorney Marvin Schilling, no action was taken against the officers. Deputy Sheriff Guess shot and killed Pat O'Day at Estelline, Tex., last January. O'Day was sought for a killing.

Salvador Cortes Rubio, after being questioned, was released to R. C. Conine, a dentist and former resident of Mexico. He declared he had possessed a weapon, although he said there were none in the motor car. No weapon was found in his possession.

He was unable, he said, to give details of the shooting because he was a short distance away from the others when it occurred. He declared this afternoon he desired a complete investigation and prosecution of the case, if necessary, and expressed confidence he would be vindicated. He said he first fired when he saw a weapon protruding from a blazer worn by the first youth getting out of the automobile.

Ortiz Rubio Voices Sorrow, Is Anxious for His Two Sons.

MEXICO CITY, June 8.—President Ortiz Rubio expressed great sorrow today at the killing of Emilio Cortes Rubio and Manuel Gomez at Ardmore, Ok. He felt some bereavement, he said, for his sons, Guillermo and Fernando, who were school mates of the two boys.

P. G. WODEHOUSE 'DAZED' AT WHAT MOVIES PAY FOR

Got $104,000 for Doctoring One Play and Writing Libretto That Wasn't Used.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 8.—P. G. Wodehouse, English humorist, looked back today over a year's work in motion pictures just completed and confessed "it dazes me."

"They paid me $2000 a week—$104,000—and I cannot see what they engaged me for," he said, referring to his employment with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio.

"You see, I understood I was engaged to write stories for the screen. After all I have 20 novels, 20 successful plays and countless magazine stories to my credit. Yet apparently they had the greatest difficulty in finding anything for me to do."

"Twice during the year they brought completed scenarios of other people's stories to me and asked me to do some dialogue. Fifteen or sixteen people had tinkered with those stories. The dialogue was really adequate. All I did was to touch it up here and there."

"Then they set me to work on a story called 'Rosalie,' which was to have some music numbers. It was a pleasant little thing and I put three months on it. When it was finished they thanked me politely and remarked that as musicals didn't seem to be going so well they guessed they would not use it."

"That about sums up what I was called upon to do for my $104,000. Isn't it amazing?"

"Personally, I received the most courteous treatment. But see what happened to my friend, Roland Pertwee at Warner Brothers. He did a story for Marilyn Miller and they slapped him on the back and said it was great. He returned to the studio as usual next morning and was informed by the policeman at the gate that he could not be let in, as he was fired."

"It's all so unbelievable, isn't it?"

STRIKE DISORDERS SPREAD IN PITTSBURGH COAL FIELD

Several Injured in Clashes Between Miners and State Police.

PITTSBURGH, June 8.—Strike disorders in the Pittsburgh district coal fields grew more serious today with the shooting and wounding of two strike demonstrators and injury of a State policeman. Strikers and sympathizers clashed with police in Washington County, and other demonstrations were broken up without violence. Fifteen men were arrested on charges of felonious assault and battery and inciting to riot near the Westfield mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. One man was wounded in the right forearm and another received a flesh wound in the back. Officers reported that Trooper Earl Limbers of Troop D, Butler was knocked from his horse and attacked by the demonstrators. The officers said the two strikers were wounded when Limbers' fellow officers went to his rescue.

A crowd of more than 1000 strikers and sympathizers was dispersed at Ellsworth while they were marching to the Ellsworth mine of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Police used tear gas. An Ellsworth policeman and a demonstrator were hurt slightly.

A similar gathering at the Lincoln Hill mine of the Lincoln Gas Coal Co., near Washington, and bands of miners marching from McDonald and Avella to the Westfield mine, were dispersed without resistance.

Doctor Testifies at Inquest Floyd Brown Was Drunk When Auto Struck Charles J. Hoelscher.

CHASED BY DEPUTIES, IGNORED STOP LIGHT

Arrested After Car Crashed Into Traffic Standard at Manchester and North and South Roads.

Charles J. Hoelscher, 35-year-old painting contractor of Brentwood, was killed early yesterday at Manchester and North and South roads when struck by the automobile of an intoxicated driver, who was being pursued by deputies for speeding.

The driver, who said he is Floyd Brown, 24 years old, an automobile mechanic, 4348 Delmar boulevard, was ordered held for the grand jury following an inquest today.

Brown was driving 60 miles an hour as he approached North and South road from the west about 1 a. m., according to Deputy Constables Fred Haskell and Glyn Smith of Central Township, who took up the pursuit when Brown passed their machine in Manchester road about two miles west. His path blocked by machines waiting for a traffic signal to change, Brown swerved sharply to the right, passing between the other automobiles and the curb.

Hoelscher, walking toward his home at 1127 North and South road, was struck and his body hurled about 20 feet. His left leg was severed, and his skull crushed. The machine then struck the traffic standard at the southeast corner and halted. Haskell and Smith, who were close behind, arrested Brown as he stepped from his wrecked machine. A physician, who examined him, said he was drunk.

DISCHARGED SERVANT ADMITS KILLING DOCTOR

Stabbed and Beat Brooklyn Physician When Caught in $54 Burglary.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 8.—George Damilar, a Filipino houseboy—a youth with a cauliflower ear—described in detail today how he stabbed Dr. George Edward Deely to death last Tuesday when the Brooklyn specialist surprised him robbing the Deely mansion in Brooklyn.

Captured in Philadelphia, and brought here by a ruse, the physician's former servant confessed, re-enacted the death struggle and was indicted and held for trial, all within a few hours.

Damilar said he went to the doctor's house to steal because his "girl friend," the wife of another Filipino, needed money. He had been discharged by Deely five days before the killing. He said he let himself into the house with a key he had stolen, crept to the doctor's bedroom and took $54 from a dresser.

"But I must have bumped into a chair because the doctor woke up," he told detectives. "He said, 'George, you black scoundrel, get out of here.'"

"I smacked him in the mouth with my fist. I used to be a boxer. He fell down and got up again. I smacked him 'on the button' and knocked him out. I dashed into the pantry and got a fruit knife. I stabbed him a lot of times. Then I picked up a piece of wire and tied it around his neck. I took his pocketbook and ran out of the house."

John O'Hagen, youthful detective, who traced a slim lead to Philadelphia and got his man, a feat for which he was promoted and awarded an $800 annual increase in pay.

O'Hagen and another detective were waiting early today when Damilar arrived at Green's Hotel in Philadelphia from a rooming house. Wishing to avoid delay in extradition, they told him they were not looking for him as a suspect, but would be obliged if he would come to New York to tell what he knew about the doctor's visitors. He complied, and as the train passed the New York State line they arrested him.

Deely, a middle-aged bachelor, was widely known as an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.

Fair and Warmer Tonight and Tomorrow.

THE TEMPERATURES.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 8.—How can the submarine Nautilus grope her way underneath the Arctic ice crust without becoming a helpless derelict?

NAUTILUS GOING WELL IN SMOOTHER WATER

Wilkins Seven Times Passes Shellfish for Which Submarine Is Named.

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS (Copyright, 1931.)

ABOARD SUBMARINE NAUTILUS AT SEA (By Radio), June 8.—After two days of rolling and pitching, the Nautilus has settled down and, in a smoother sea, with both engines running, is making good headway again.

The broadside of her superstructure catches the wind, which today was abeam, and this, with the swell of the seas, leads her to leeward until the deck of the superstructure is almost under water.

This makes it uncomfortable, to say the least. Wet decks, with no shelter for the watch and with streams of water slopping down the conning tower flooding the control room, in enough to try the temper and patience of most men. But members of our crew, all of them veterans of the sea, make light of their troubles and carry on in a splendid manner.

The motion today was enough to turn most landmen and many sailors green with sickness, but only two on board, Engineer Riggs and the cabin boy, Fleutich, showed signs of mal de mer.

All hatches except the conning tower have been battened down for many hours and the air inboard is probably worse than it will ever need to be when we are running submerged under the Arctic ice. We will have smooth seas at least in the Arctic and we expect to be able to come up and renew the air every 16 hours.

We are passing through the warm gulf stream. Blobs of seaweed float past, flying fish leap from the bow and skim before us over the waves. The porpoise plays a merry game and seven times this afternoon our namesakes gay colored Nautiluses, with their pink and pale blue sails full set, went by. Our escort keeps in the offing and we exchange messages frequently by wireless.

We have made out our course, which is about due east. We made 220 miles in the last 24 hours. Our noon position was latitude 41.50 north, longitude 55.54 west, which is about 550 miles off Boston.

HOW NAUTILUS WILL FIND WAY UNDER ICE

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 8.—How can the submarine Nautilus grope her way underneath the Arctic ice crust without becoming a helpless derelict?

This question was answered recently by Chief Electrician Frank Blumery, gyro compass expert, "lent" to the expedition by the United States Navy.

Even though the men of the Nautilus never saw the Arctic sun, they could find their way unerringly, Blumery said. He declared the very motion of the earth itself in the higher latitudes would point the way. He explained:

BILLION INVOLVED IN TWO MERGERS OF CHICAGO BANKS

First National Takes Over Foreman-State, Central Trust and National Bank of Republic Unite.

STEPS TAKEN AFTER 2-DAY CONFERENCES

Six Outlying Depositories Affiliated With Foreman Interests Fail to Open Doors.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Two of the most important bank mergers in the history of Chicago were made early today when the First National Bank and the First Union Trust & Savings Bank, its affiliate, absorbed the Foreman-State National Bank and the Foreman-State Trust & Savings Bank, and a consolidation was arranged between the Central Trust Co. of Illinois and the National Bank of the Republic.

Through acquisition of the Foreman banks, the First National total resources will approximate $83,000,000, making it a close second to the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Co. one of the largest banks in the country. Total resources of the Continental on March 25, the date of the last bank call, were $1,122,942,654.

The Central Trust-National Bank of the Republic merger will result in a bank with total resources of more than $250,000,000, the third largest banking unit in Chicago. The new bank will be called the Central Republic Bank.

Deposits of the First National Foreman banks total $720,645,000 of which the First National and Union Trust contribute $572,403,000 and the Foreman banks $158,242,000. Deposits of the Central Trust-National Republic aggregate $235,540,000, the Central Trust having $133,354,000 and the National Republic $142,186,000.

Absorption of the Foreman banks by the First National group was accompanied by an indemnity fund of $11,500,000, guaranteeing the First National against loss up to that amount in the orderly liquidation of the non-liquid assets of the banks.

Directors and leading stockholders guaranteed $2,550,000 of this amount and members of the Chicago Clearing House Association were called on to stand by to the extent of $10,000,000.

In return for this guarantee, the First National agrees to pay a fee of 3 per cent for savings deposits of the Foreman-State Trust and Savings Bank, which are retained as a result of the consolidation, and 1 per cent on commercial deposits of the Foreman-State National Bank.

Traylor and Dawes.

The consolidations were decided upon early today after almost continuous conferences since Saturday afternoon.

Two names appeared frequently in statements coming out of the conferences—Traylor as the leading figure in the absorption of the Foreman-State by the First National, and Ambassador Charles A. Dawes as the man whose return from London brought about the consummation of the oft-rumored Central Trust-Bank of Republic merger. The Central Trust has long been known as the "Dawes Brothers Bank" and the former Vice President has in recent years been honorary chairman of the week-end conferences, and was seen as early as 5 a. m. today.

The Central Trust and National Bank of the Republic will go under the name of Central Republic Bank and Trust Co.

G. M. Reynolds began early yesterday. Among the bankers participating was George M. Reynolds, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Co. For the first time in the history of the mergers it was reported that a reorganization of the Foreman banks might be made with an influx of $10,000,000 in new capital, of which $7,500,000 was to have been furnished by William Wrigley Jr., owner of the Chicago National League baseball team; Albert D. Lasker and John Herz, with the remainder coming from banks in the Clearing House Association.

Transfer of the assets of the Foreman banks to the First National will start as soon as practicable, it was announced. Meanwhile the business of the banks will be conducted without interference until the changes have been completed.

Clearing House Statement.

Reynolds issued a statement at 5 o'clock this morning as chairman of the clearing house.

EARTHQUAKES CAUSE GAS LEAK IN HISTORIC ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD

LONDON, June 8.

POLICE threw a cordon around part of St. Paul's Churchyard this afternoon and forbade smoking by passers-by or in offices in the vicinity while workmen searched for a leak in a gas main cracked by yesterday's earthquake.

Much gas was escaping and it was feared that it might be ignited. The fumes were noticeable for 50 yards or more along Watling street, facing the Cathedral.

Investigation disclosed that old cracks in Lincoln Cathedral had been widened half an inch by the earthquake and that cracks had appeared in some of the flying buttresses of the chapter house. The Cathedral surveyor said the cracks were "rather serious."

SENATOR BINGHAM SUGGESTS WAR DEBTS MORATORIUM

Finance Committee Member Declares, However, Against Cancellation or Revision.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—A moratorium of two or three years on war debt payments was suggested today by Senator Bingham (Rep.), Connecticut, as a possible means of aiding in relieving world depression. Bingham, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, declared against cancellation or revision of war debts.

"I can see in the stringency existing why we could suggest a moratorium," he said, "but I see no reason for adding a war debt on American taxpayers."

ORDERS CAPONE HENCHMAN REMANDED FOR DEPORTATION

U. S. Judge in Chicago Denies Petition for Habeas Corpus Writ to "Mope" Volpe.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson today dismissed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of Tony ("Mope") Volpe, former bodyguard of "Scarface Al" Capone and ordered him remanded to immigration authorities for deportation in accordance with a previous order issued by Secretary of Labor Doak.

Judge Wilkerson granted a stay to permit Volpe's attorney to file an appeal with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Volpe is No. 2 on the list of gangsters classed by the Chicago Crime Commission as "public enemies." The attempt to have him deported is one of the moves made by Chicago Federal authorities in their campaign which has resulted in the conviction of the Capone and other gangsters for income tax violations, contempt of court and other offenses.

HANDS LINDBERGH SUMMONS; KNOCKED DOWN BY MECHANIC

Process Server Disappears Before Nature of Paper Is Learned.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A process server handed Col. Charles Lindbergh a summons today just as he was about to take off from Curtiss Field in Queens for a test flight in monoplane with Mrs. Lindbergh. The nature of the summons was not discussed.

The man who served the summons retired to the side lines with a remark about how easy it was to serve papers on "big fellows." He was promptly felled by a blow on the jaw from a mechanic, who resented his tone.

REOPENING OF REPARATIONS ISSUE NOW SEEMS LIKELY

Spokesman for Anglo-German Conversations and Official Communique Stress Need for Co-Operation in World-Wide Crisis

"THE BALL HAS BEEN STARTED ROLLING"

London Press Sees Promise in Mellon and Stimson Trips to Europe—Bruning and Curtius Talk With King George.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 8.—A world conference to reopen completely the problem of war reparations seemed today to stand out as a possibility, following the week-end conference between the heads of the British and German Governments and the presentation of the visitors to King George.

London newspapers today linked forthcoming visits to Europe of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon of the United States with a promise made at the British-German conference to collaborate with other Governments.

A spokesman for the conversations at Chequers, country home of Prime Minister MacDonald, said that the world field of economic and political troubles was discussed, particularly as affected by the "Young Plan" and other factors. MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson participated in the conversations for Great Britain; Chancellor Heinrich Brüning and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius for Germany.

"We feel that the ball has been started rolling on the whole international economic question, especially reparations," said the spokesman. "Naturally, England and Germany alone cannot solve the problem. But it is important that parties to the Chequers conference went on record before the whole world in urging international co-operation and in promising each other to collaborate closely with the other Governments concerned."

Communique Is Issued.

A communique issued by the Foreign Office said: "Both parties were agreed that, in addition to efforts and measures of a national character, a revival of confidence and of prosperity depended upon international co-operation. In this spirit, both governments will endeavor to deal with the present crisis in close collaboration with the other governments of the world."

The probability that a meeting similar to that at Chequers might be held on German soil in the near future also was foreseen in a statement by D. Curtius to the German Embassy.

"We expressed our gratitude to our English colleagues, especially Mr. MacDonald and his daughters," he said, "and our desire that it might some day be our pleasure to reciprocate. We hope this will be soon."

Chancellor Brüning was understood to have asked the British statesmen's assistance in feeling out Germany's creditor nations, particularly the United States, on the possibility of deferring reparations payments regulated by the "postponable" clauses of the Young Plan. MacDonald was said to have indicated that Great Britain could not take the initiative in this respect.

The London Herald today published the following: "Will the coming of Mellon help toward the adoption of practical measures that must be taken swiftly if a reparations crisis is not to break disastrously later in the year? It would be disastrous to wait until the storm bursts and Germany exclaims her right to withhold the transfer of part of her reparations payment, punching a hole in the budgets of each creditor country and making the payment of the war debts to the United States intolerably difficult if not impossible."

Presented to King George.

Chancellor Brüning and Foreign Minister Curtius were presented to King George at Buckingham Palace at noon by Ambassador von Neurath. The heads of the German state remained with the King about 15 minutes then returned to their hotel. It was the first time a member of the German Government had been received by the British monarch.

COOLIDGE TO TAKE A REST FROM WRITING

Will Discontinue Newspaper Articles During Vacation Period Beginning July 1.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 8.—Calvin Coolidge is to discontinue temporarily his daily newspaper articles. The former President, believing "the brains of the country need relaxation and refreshment more than ever this season," will begin his vacation July 1, just a year after his first dispatches were published. He has not announced the date of his return to syndicate writing, but the organization handling his material said it would be some time in September.

In one of his recent articles, Mr. Coolidge suggested that the nation's leaders make an especial effort this summer to obtain the benefits of a vacation.

"They owe a duty to themselves, their business and their associates to get more than the usual period of rest," he said. "The country will be further advanced in October if July and August find many visitors at the shore and in the hills. Just now we need that replenishment of body and soul that comes only in withdrawing from work and familiar scenes, and seeking diversion in new activities and surroundings. This year, above most others, the brain and the hand need to be replenished by rest."

No announcement was made as to where Mr. Coolidge plans to spend his vacation. It was said, however, he desired complete privacy.

BULLETS HALT YOUTH'S FLIGHT IN STOLEN AUTO

John D. Moore Jr., Son of Limestone Firm President, in Jail at Clayton After Chase.

OWNER OF MACHINE NOT TO PROSECUTE

Car Taken From in Front of Home of C. H. Hoyle, McKnight Village, and Another Left in Its Place.

John D. Moore Jr., 22-year-old son of the president of the Illinois Electric Limestone Co., was released this afternoon from jail at Clayton after having been arrested early yesterday in a stolen automobile.

Moore, who lives with his parents at 6252 Northwood avenue, was said by Deputy Constables to have been intoxicated when they dragged him from the large stolen sedan after a chase in which they punctured a tire and put two holes in the rear of the sedan with pistols and a sawed-off shotgun.

The sedan is the property of Charles H. Hoyle, 33 Dromara road, McKnight Village. When it was taken, a coach stolen earlier Saturday night from Dave W. Bell, 4144 Delmar, was left in front of the Hoyle residence. Both Hoyle and Bell declined to prosecute young Moore.

Hoyle telephoned the Sheriff's office at 1 a. m. Sunday, reporting the theft of his Lincoln sedan and the presence of a Hudson coach in front of his house. The information was turned over to Deputy Constables Fred Haskell and Glen Smith, who had just brought in an intoxicated automobile mechanic whose car had killed a pedestrian at Manchester and North and South roads.

Hoyle reported his car was being driven east in Ladue road. As Haskell and Smith left the courthouse they saw the Lincoln being driven south in Meramec avenue, a section of the North and South road in the Clayton city limits.

In a borrowed car, the deputies chased the Lincoln to North and South and Clayton roads, where they hailed a Clayton police car and, in that, continued west in Clayton road. They overtook the car after a chase of about two miles, when a charge from the shotgun punctured one of the rear tires. Moore, they reported, was unable to give a coherent statement of his possession of the car.

The Hudson, they learned upon checking its license number, had been stolen earlier in the evening from Skinner and Delmar boulevards.

75 WATER COLORS BY BRITONS BEING SHOWN AT ART MUSEUM

55 Members of Royal Society Represented in Exhibition of English Art.

An exhibition of 75 water colors by members of the Royal Society of British Artists has been installed in gallery 30 at the Art Museum in Forest Park, and will be open daily from 10 to 5 o'clock.

Water color has been employed by most British artists of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries as their favorite medium, and this particular collection, in which 55 artists are represented, is characterized by traditional treatment and typically English subject matter.

A few of the English subjects are "View Over Bath, England," by Sylvia Gosse, "Market Street, St. Albans City," by A. Warren Dow, "The Old Bridge," by Bernard Castle, by G. H. Downing, "Waterloo Bridge, London," by Capt. Edward Handley-Read, "Church of St. Mary in Strand, London," by Hesketh Hubbard, "The Gloaming," by John Nicholson, "A Country Churchyard in the Cotswolds," by Dorothea Selous. Some of the foreign subjects are "Jerusalem Bazaars," by Mrs. H. Bowman, "The Water Gate, St. John's Hospital, Bruges," by Ernest W. Haselhurst, "Diocesan School, Stamford," by J. H. St. John, "Interior of St. Mark's, Venice," by Barry Pittar, and "The Yoho Valley, Canadian Rockies," by Leonard Richmond. The exhibition is circulated by the American Federation of Arts and will remain at the museum until the end of June.

GETS TWO 12-YEAR TERMS FOR ROBBERY WITH PISTOL

Everett Scott, 28, Admits Taking Part in 21 Holdups, According to Police.

Everett Scott, 28 years old, was sentenced to two concurrent 12-year terms in the penitentiary by Circuit Judge Ryan today, following pleas of guilty of robbery with a deadly weapon.

Asked by the Court if he had intended shooting any of his victims should they resist, Scott, who admitted, police say, that he participated in 21 holdups, responded, "No, sir, I kept the safety catch on all the time."

Scott pleaded guilty of holding up the Penn Drug Co., 809 Hamilton avenue, last Jan. 26, for $50, and to robbing Abe Edelstein, a dry goods merchant, 629 North Vandeventer avenue, of $31 on April 2.

Banker's Ex-Wife and Young Husband

MR. AND MRS. FOWLER MCCORMICK.

WIFE SAYS BANKER SELDOM KISSED HER

She Declares Charles C. Miles Rarely Missed Good-Night to Secretary.

Trial of the divorce suit of Charles C. Miles, president of Hiram Bank, was resumed in Circuit Judge Mueller's Court at Clayton today with Mrs. Susan C. Miles, 6754 Bartmer avenue, testifying that although her husband rarely missed kissing his secretary good night, he told his wife farewell that way only infrequently.

During the three days of trial of the suit preceding its continuance on May 28, Miles' attentions to his secretary, Miss Myrtle Junge, 5881 1/2 Plymouth avenue, were the principal point of issue between the parties. Both charge general indignities, and Mrs. Miles alleges association with the secretary as her principal ground.

Going back to the circumstance under which Miss Junge, the fiancée of an assistant cashier at the bank who was killed in a holdup, came to live with the Mileses, Mrs. Miles said she herself had invited the girl.

"When she was living with Mrs. Hopson (the mother of the assistant cashier), she came to us and said she was very unhappy, as she was going to have to move," Mrs. Miles related. "I didn't know why she was having to move, so I suggested she come to live with us as our daughter."

Immediately afterward, Mrs. Miles testified, her husband began to make it a practice to take the girl to night school, and would even hurry away from their social engagements to go for her after classes.

"I saw him kiss her many times," Mrs. Miles said. "Once it was when I was on a neighbor's porch and saw them over at our home. Many times he went to her room to kiss her good-night, dressed in pajamas."

She described an incident during the last years of their married life, when Miles became angry because she had locked her desk, and started to beat her. "I was in the kitchen," she told, "and he dragged me to the bathroom upstairs, blacked my eyes and beating me with his fists, and even putting his foot on me. When I ran to the door for aid, he followed and begged me not to go, saying it would ruin him if I did."

Previously introduced to show that other women saw her with her face bruised as a result of the blows, Miles has denied any such assault. Mrs. Miles denied today that she had been solicited about the secretary returning to their home after a temporary estrangement from her husband in June, 1929.

"When Mr. Miles came home after living at the hotel several weeks, he asked me to let Miles Junge return," Mrs. Miles said. "I wanted to bring him back to his former self, so I finally consented, thinking that it might help."

Miss Junge did not return, however, and Mr. and Mrs. Miles eventually separated a year later. Miles, who is 53, testified in his suit that his wife constantly harassed and annoyed him, bought expensive clothes, and refused to carry out a number of household duties.

On cross-examination, Miles' lawyer developed that Mrs. Miles had been married twice before she married Miles in 1911. Both marriages ended in divorce. Mrs. Miles was 35 years old when she married Miles, she said.

FIRST HEARING OF P. S. CO. WAGE DISPUTE SET FOR AUG. 10

Arbiters Postpone Action to Allow Union to Prepare Evidence of Living Conditions.

The first hearing of the wage dispute between the Public Service Co. and union employees who are objecting to a proposed 10 per cent contingent wage cut was set for Aug. 10 at 10 a. m. by the Arbitration Committee today after O. D. Zimmering, a Chicago economist representing the union, asked for time to prepare evidence of living conditions among the workers.

The hearing was set at an organization meeting of the committee at City Hall. The committee consists of former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, representing the union, Edward J. Miller, president of the St. Louis Screw & Bolt Co., representing the Public Service Co., and former Circuit Judge Harry Sprague, chosen as third member of the other two.

Thomas E. Francis, general counsel for the street car company, told the committee the company was ready to submit its evidence. Leslie Vickers, an economist, and George Owen of the Research Department of the transit company, were also present as its representatives. Zimmering and William R. Schneider, an attorney, represented the union.

E. DAVIS REALTY & MORTGAGE CO. RECEIVERSHIP SUIT

Mrs. Etta W. Albers Criticizes Methods of Handling Davis Gardens Subdivision in Clayton.

Suit for a receiver for nine allied corporations promoting subdivisions and home-building in St. Louis County was filed in Circuit Court today by Mrs. Etta W. Albers, holder of two subscription contracts totaling $16,000.

The corporations sued are the E. Davis Realty & Mortgage Co., E. Davis Realty Co., D. W. Realty Co., Altadena Realty Co., Sixty-Four Hundred Realty Co., West Homes Realty Co., Eighty-Hundred Realty Co., West Clayton Realty Co. and Biltmore Homes Co.

Có-defendants are Everett Davis, 22 Watkins and W. C. Vornbrock, president, vice president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of all the companies, the petition sets forth. The concerns have joint offices at 1101 Locust street.

Besides a receiver the petition asks for an accounting so that the assets and liabilities of the several defendants may be definitely determined and segregated in order to establish the amount to which the plaintiff as a syndicate subscriber is entitled, as well as to determine the rights of other subscribers and creditors; also to determine the exact amount alleged to have been misappropriated by individual defendants and to recover the same.

The petition states that all of the stock of the corporations is owned by the three individual defendants, who constitute the board of directors of each company, with the exception of the amount to which the plaintiff as a syndicate subscriber is entitled, as well as to determine the rights of other subscribers and creditors; also to determine the exact amount alleged to have been misappropriated by individual defendants and to recover the same.

WINNER OF SUIT FOR ESTATE OF $250,000 DIES

D. H. Nation Jr. Enjoyed in Recent Years Foster Father's Wealth After Years Without Money.

The Public Administrator today took charge of the estate of David H. Nation Jr., 1155 Dover place, who died yesterday of diabetes.

Nation, who was 54 years old, was the adopted son and sole heir to the $250,000 estate of David H. Nation, a real estate dealer, who died in 1915. He was taken from a foundling institution when 3 years old and for more than 30 years lived as a companion to the elder Nation, a recluse. During that time he received only his clothing and food and lodging for his various services, which included cooking and washing, and the repair of about 30 South St. Louis houses owned by his foster father.

When the elder Nation died he left no will and a search of his effects failed to disclose the papers necessary to prove his adopted son's uncontested right to the estate. Relatives of the elder Nation filed suit for a share in the estate, but the courts upheld the claim of the adopted son.

Upon obtaining the estate, Nation changed from the hard life he had known and began to live comfortably. In 1918 he married Miss Hilda Bamberger, nearly 20 years his junior, following a romance, which began in an attorney's office while Nation was seeking to establish his rights as the foster son of the recluse. They had twin daughters, Shirley and Verlie. Mrs. Nation died three years ago while the family was living on Polo drive, Clayton, and Nation moved back to South St. Louis with his daughters, who are now about 11 years old.

Like his foster father, Nation apparently died without leaving a will. A further search for the document is being made, and in the interim the Public Administrator has taken charge.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 1:30 p. m., from the Ziegenhain Undertaking Co., 2623 Cherokee street, to Valhalla Mausoleum.

Davis Denies Charge.
Everett Davis, president, denied there had been any misappropriation of or mismanagement of money and other assets or that the contracts had not been carried out. Mrs. Albers, he said, made inquiries concerning the progress of the business, but did not threaten any suit. He said he was surprised by her action.

"Right now," Davis said, "the real estate market is more or less inactive, but the signs of a pickup in business, especially in new homes, are present. Our concerns have handled approximately 26 subdivisions promoted in which we have met with success. I understand three subdivisions are involved in the suit. There is no ground for a receivership and the petition will be resisted."

SHOT AND BEATEN, SAYS MEN DRIVING BY FIRED ON AUTO

Henry Mater Reports Attack on Beer Flat Companions Near Grant's Farm on Gravois Road.

Henry Mater, 38 years old, 835 South Ninth street, staggered into the receiving room at city hospital last night shot in the head, left arm and left side and badly beaten.

Mater said he had been drinking home brew with three men in a saloon at Gravois and Banninger avenues, when they suggested a ride into St. Louis County. When they stopped near Grant's farm on the Gravois road, he said, another machine approached, the three occupants firing a fusillade without warning.

Only Mater was wounded, he told police, and his companions drove him to Fourteenth street and Lafayette avenue, putting him out there with directions to go to the hospital. He said he did not know his companions and would be unable to identify his assailants.

One bullet struck Mater in the head and another passed through the left arm, inflicting the wound in his side. Physicians said his skull had been fractured by the beating.

An investigation of his clothing disclosed that his shirt had not been torn by the bullet which struck his arm and side, although it had passed through his underclothing. Mater said he was fully clothed at the time he was shot.

It was at the South Ninth street address given by Mater that Sylvester E. Niehaus, police character, wounded the rooming-house keeper, Mrs. Dorothy Hartman, May 26, and then shot and killed himself. Niehaus was said to have shot Mrs. Hartman because he resented being forced to move from the place after the arrest of his brother, Oscar, also a roomer there, for questioning about a murder.

Ben Flitter, another of the defendants, whose case was docketed for today, obtained a continuance until Friday. Two others pleaded guilty and paid fines last week.

CHURCH ORGAN IN USE 50 YEARS TO BE SUPPLANTED

Pastor of Centenary Methodist Church Mourns Passing of Old Instrument.

After being in use for more than 50 years, the pipe organ at Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was played for the last time yesterday. The organ, considered the last word in musical instruments 50 years ago, will be dismantled, starting today, in order to make way for a new $50,000 organ, the memorial gift of a member.

"What a story the old organ could tell," said the Rev. C. W. Tadlock from his pulpit yesterday morning. "During its life its keys have been touched by masters of the times, and generations, including some of the great men of America, have listened to its music."

"Countless young people have pledged their lives to each other under the benediction of its happy wedding music; its solemn tones have sanctified the sorrow of numberless relatives of departed loved ones."

"On the old organ have been played the mighty songs of the church—'How Firm a Foundation,' 'O Happy Day,' 'Come Thou Almighty King' and many others. But, like all things in this life, it passes on to make way for the new."

The new organ will be used for the first time early in the fall.

ANOTHER BOOKMAKER PLEADS GUILTY AND PAYS $250 FINE

Second Case Docketed for Today Continued Until Friday.

Bob Henry, a bookmaker, pleaded guilty before Circuit Judge Ryan today under a charge of setting up a gambling device, and paid a fine of $250. He was one of 40 bookmakers who have been or are to be charged with the same offense, whose counsel has agreed with the Circuit Attorney, to $250 fines for each.

Henry was arrested on Oct. 17 after a plain clothes policeman had given him a marked bill for a 50-cent bet on a horse race at Henry's establishment at 11 North Ninth street.

Ben Flitter, another of the defendants, whose case was docketed for today, obtained a continuance until Friday. Two others pleaded guilty and paid fines last week.

BANK ROBBER ESCAPES FROM HOSPITAL NO. 2

Supposedly Suffering From Injury, He Evades Guard and Goes Down Fire Escape.

Clarence Davidson, 19-year-old cabaret entertainer, who was sentenced to 20 years in prison for participation in the holdup of the Easton-Taylor Trust Co., in which four Negroes obtained $6300, Feb. 19, evaded a deputy sheriff detailed to guard him and escaped from City Hospital No. 2 last night.

Strapped and chained to his bed, where he was said to be suffering from an injury resulting from his leap from a hotel window when he was about to be arrested following the robbery, Davidson asked the deputy, Thomas DeWitt, to release him and accompany him to a wash room.

While DeWitt waited outside, the prisoner climbed over a seven-foot partition to an adjoining room, raised a window and fled down the fire escape. Persons near the hospital reported that they saw a Negro in gray hospital garb running swiftly through the streets.

Davidson had several minutes' start before his escape was discovered. The deputy, impatient at waiting, called to him. Another patient in the room from which Davidson reached the fire escape then reported the escape.

Davidson and Floyd Dandridge, who was sentenced to a 10-year term, when he and Davidson pleaded guilty May 22, were captured at

Two of the robbers were passengers in the bus. The other five were in automobiles, one behind and one in front of the bus, which was going from Tulsa, Ok., to El Paso, Tex. It was halted about 1:30 a. m. on a detour from U. S. Highway No. 66.

The robbers left each passenger enough money to wire home for funds and purchase breakfast. Several women saved their currency by putting it in their stockings. Henry Maczill of Champlain, Ill., hid his money in his shoes and saved it. Alma Jean Orr of Lyons, Kan., concealed a diamond ring valued at $175 in her mouth. Officers did not announce the name of the suspect arrested at Erick. He will be brought to this city.

READY TO DESIGNATE ROUTE FOR COUNTY SUPERHIGHWAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, June 8.—Final designation of the route of the proposed superhighway through St. Louis County, which has been in controversy for more than three years, is scheduled for tomorrow at the June meeting of the State Highway Commission here.

Selection of the route has been deferred by the commission from time to time since April 1929.

Chief Engineer T. H. Cutler said the Highway Department engineers would recommend selection by the commission of what is known as the Clayton-Conway route, which they originally proposed.

Cutler said that if the commission did not select the Clayton-Conway route, the engineers would not recommend any of the alternative routes which have been suggested, but likely would later submit plans to the commission for widening of United States highway No. 40 (St. Charles road) between St. Louis and St. Charles, with possible provision for a new bridge across to take the place of the present bridge carrying No. 40 over the Missouri River at St. Charles.

MEAT CUTTER WINS SUIT AGAINST HIS LAWYER WIFE

Harry Beckerle Permitted to Have Joint Ownership in Apartment Building.

Circuit Judge Hartmann decided today in favor of Harry Beckerle, meat cutter, against the latter's wife, Nettie, a lawyer, in Beckerle's suit to set aside a conveyance of title whereby he was divested of joint ownership with his wife of a four-family apartment at 4302 DeFont street.

The Court found Beckerle did not sign a warranty deed in 1927 under which the property was conveyed to a "straw man," from whom Mrs. Beckerle subsequently obtained the title.

Following the decision Beckerle immediately filed a $10,000 damage suit against his wife, alleging she instigated a suit for breach of promise against him recently. He denies knowing the plaintiff in the breach of promise action, described as Miss Elizabeth Mueller.

Mrs. Beckerle at one time served as Provisional Judge in Police Court. About a year ago she sued for divorce, but the suit was thrown out after contest.

CASHIER IS HELD UP IN THEATER; $319 TAKEN

Robber Takes Money Sack From Woman as She Puts It in Safe.

Mrs. Harriett Austin, 4132 West Pine boulevard, cashier at the Pageant Theater, 5551 Delmar boulevard, was placing a canvas sack containing $319 in a safe at the theater office Sunday night when an armed man held her up. He seized the bag and fled east on Delmar boulevard.

Cash estimated at $700 to $1000 was taken by robbers who knocked the combination from a safe at the William J. Brennan Grocery Co. store at 954 Goodfellow avenue. Entrance was gained by prying off a steel grating and forcing a rear window.

When a youthful Negro reached toward his pocket as if to produce a weapon, demanding the contents of the cash register, Miss Allee Robinson, proprietress of the confectionery at 2708 North Sarah street, screamed. The Negro ran.

Other holdups: Filling station, 423 South Vandeventer avenue, $50 taken; drug store, 5425 South Grand boulevard, $70.

Ray Zipp, 2334 Junata avenue, had just driven John Stephens, 4260A Arsenal street, to his home when two armed men forced their way into the machine. Compelling Zipp to drive to Connecticut and Bent avenues, they robbed him of $5 and put him and Stephens out of the automobile, which was recovered later.

Walter Haefert, 2557W Hebert street, was sitting in his automobile in front of 3658 West Pine boulevard when he was held up by two men who took $5 and his watch and drove away in the machine in which Haefert was carrying drums and other equipment valued at $75. The automobile was recovered but the drums had been removed.

Marvin Perkins, 3850 Missouri avenue, reported he was robbed of $28 by three men who blocked Highway No. 61 between Fredericktown and Farmington with their automobile, forcing him to stop his machine.

BANKER'S DAUGHTER MISSING

Watertown (N. Y.) Young Woman Disappeared Tuesday.

By the Associated Press. WATERTOWN, N. Y., June 8.—Search for Elizabeth Wardell, 24, daughter of Addison Wardwell, retired president of the Watertown National Bank, today was spreading across the country.

Miss Wardwell disappeared last Tuesday. Her parents said they knew of no motive for her leaving home. They said the young woman was unprepared for a journey of any length, taking no luggage and having not more than $10 in her purse. She was described as about five feet tall and weighed 170 pounds. At the time she left she was wearing a white cotton dress figured in red, a dark blue coat and a light hat. For a year she had been living at home after her return from finishing schools in Boston and in Maryland. The parents have been in communication with friends of the family in New York and Chicago, where the girl had a desire to visit. She was last seen Tuesday evening on the Watertown-Syracuse highway with a man whose identity has not been determined.

Miners Strike at Steubenville, O. By the Associated Press. STEUBENVILLE, O., June 8.—Two hundred employees of the Hanna Coal Co. called a strike today while the company prepared to continue operations under official protection. The strike was voted after the employees organized a "National Miners' Union." They demanded an eight-hour day, reinstatement of men alleged to have been discharged for union affiliations, abolition of the "average system" and the employment of a check weighman.

70TH COMMENCEMENT AT WASHINGTON U.

564 Degrees to Be Conferred Tomorrow—Dean Shailer Mathews to Speak.

The seventieth commencement of Washington University will be held tomorrow. Degrees will be awarded to 564 students and certificates to 54 graduates of the nursing school.

After the graduates, faculty and corporation of the university march on the campus from Graham Memorial Chapel to the field house, in cap and gown, the exercises will begin at 10 a. m. Dean Shailer Mathews of the divinity school of the University of Chicago will deliver the address, on the subject, "The Administration of Optimism."

Senior students and alumni gathered at the chapel this afternoon for the presentation of scholarships, fellowships and other awards, following a luncheon on the chapel lawn. The senior class play was presented as entertainment at the luncheon.

The candidates for degrees convened in the chapel yesterday for the baccalaureate sermon, which was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Jay T. Stocking, pastor of Ellinger Congregational Church. His subject was "The Romance of Religion" and his text, "We Walk by Faith and Not by Sight."

"There is an appalling number of people today," he said, "to whom life does not seem much worth while. The most dangerous thing in western life is not the utilitarian mood but the utilitarian mood. Both literature and life betray a wide-spread sense of futility. Down under our bright lights and gay laughter there are hearts as dark and drab and cheerless as there ever were. There is a wealth of comfort that does not satisfy and a wealth of pleasure in which there is little joy."

"How shall we account for this except on the ground that men have not learned how to play the game of life? The sense of futility is the nemesis of disregarded laws. I saw an advertisement recently of an organization that promised to make men 'fit to play the game of life.' No one is fit to play the game unless he knows that the center of life must lie outside himself."

BAPTISTS OPPOSE BARRING

PACIFISTS AS CITIZENS

Convention at Kansas City Also Advocates Entry of U. S. Into World Court.

By the Associated Press. KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8.—The Northern Baptist convention today lodged a protest against the denial of citizenship to persons because of their unwillingness to bear arms. The convention, closing its annual session here, declared for "rejection and not mere limitation of all armaments, by urging progressive reduction of military budgets, by urging immediate abolition of Government preparations for poison gas and disease germ warfare."

The Baptists also advocated affiliation of the United States with the World Court. The convention adopted a resolution saying that "building up of the navy to the limits of the London naval treaty is permissive, not mandatory, and that the cost of the limit construction is prohibitive and not conducive to peace education."

Recognizing "the necessity for reasonable national defense," one resolution adopted asserts that "security of the United States alone, based on colossal preparations for war costing more than in any other nation and fear among all the nations diminish rather than increase the security of the United States."

FEDERAL JUDGE AT JOPLIN DENOUNCES GANG LEADERS

Instructions to Grand Jury Believed to Indicate Inquiry Into Liquor Ring.

By the Associated Press. JOPLIN, Mo., June 8.—Gang leaders in larger American cities, whom he called the "commanding officers in the army of crime" were denounced today by Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis, charging a Federal grand jury with investigation of "matters of great concern to the American people" relating to large liquor conspiracies.

It was understood by court attaches that Judge Otis rebuke paved the way for presentation to the grand jury of information concerning the wholesale liquor ring in Kansas City, which Federal operatives have said is headed by Al Capone. Judge Otis denounced conspiracies against the American Government, which he said were headed by persons "whose names are known to almost everyone" and others "whose names we can hardly pronounce."

FOUR INJURED IN PLANE CRASH

HARBROUCK HEIGHTS, N. J., June 8.—Four persons were seriously injured yesterday in the crash of an airplane, the motor of which stopped a few moments after the takeoff.

The pilot, George de Garmo, president of the new Standard Flying Service, evidently attempted to avoid crashing into a house. The turn he made plunged the craft from an altitude of 100 feet into a ditch. He and three passengers were unconscious when taken to Hackensack Hospital. The other injured are Charles Puff of Passaic, his daughter, Alice, 13 years old, and Ulysses Savoy of Battle River.

ARKANSAS BOARD ATTACKS REPORT ON FLOOD CONTROL

Censures Chief Army Engineer for Emphasizing Money Instead of "Protection of Life."
By the Associated Press.
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 8.—
The Arkansas Levee and Drainage Commission, in an analysis of a report by Major-General Lytle Brown, Chief of Army Engineers, on flood control in the lower Mississippi Valley, characterizes the report as "tragic in its effect and offering no practical solution for the phases involved."

In the commission's analysis, submitted Saturday to Gov. Farn-nell, it is asserted also that parts of the report "treat and dispose of the paramount feature of flood control—the protection of human life—in a light and inconsequential manner, and place as of major importance the monetary phase. . . .
All losses, direct and indirect, property and personal, if sustained, should be considered; also a conservative potential future loss should be visualized and anticipated rather than past annual average flood losses, which figures fast become obsolete."

Gen. Brown had said, "The economic basis of the question of flood control, in so far as Federal funds are concerned, ought to be the annual average property loss due to floods."

BODY OF MISSING NURSE FOUND
It Was in Shallow Grave on Staten Island.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A woman's body found in Tottenville on Staten Island was identified today as that of Lillian Prehn, 18, a nurse of West Brighton, Staten Island. She had been missing from home since March 25, said her mother, who made the identification. The body was in a shallow grave. Police today questioned several men.

SAYS ALFONSO AND SON
ACTED LIKE TOURISTS

Secretary to Secretary Ex-King Describes Visit With Juan in London.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 8.—Former King Alfonso's hope for the future is centered on his youngest son, Prince Juan, according to Fred Bowen.

Bowen was secretary to the Duke of Miranda, Alfonso's private secretary, and saw a good deal of Alfonso and his son while they were together in London.

"The King really came to London," Bowen said, "to put Prince Juan in the naval academy. As soon as that was arranged, he returned to Paris."
"It was Juan's first visit to London, and his father fixed things so that the boy might see as much of the city as possible. They might have been a pair of ordinary tourists the way they tramped through museums and art galleries."

"Except for a few calling cards, the only purchases the King made were from a Bond street tailor—uniforms for Juan."
"Prince Juan is a quiet, intelligent boy and very modest. He was always anxious to help us all he could, but he took great care not to get in the way."

"He is slim, tall and dark, like his father, and looks much like him, except that his features aren't as pronounced. He has a large nose, but not as big as Alfonso's, and the Hapsburg lip is less in evidence."

"I have been told he is the one in whose favor Alfonso wished to abdicate. The two elder Princes are not well fitted physically to be King, but Juan is perfectly normal and healthy in every way."

"His eyes are bright and he has an intelligent interest in everything that is going on. He doesn't loaf around, and if there isn't anything to do he finds something. At least, he isn't bored with life, and he has no languid royal airs. He makes friends quickly."

"He dresses very modestly. Most of the time he wore a blue suit—a young man's suit, to be sure, but not collegiate. Juan had no valet, but dressed himself."

Bowen believes that eventually the former King will settle in the south of England, saying: "His favorite son is in school there, and his mother-in-law lives at Torquay.
If he doesn't live in England he certainly will be a frequent visitor."
If Alfonso holds hope for himself or his son, he doesn't want any royalist activity in his behalf. Bowen said, "It seemed to me that he didn't want to be fighting to get back his throne."
"I answered several letters from Spanish officers who said they were resigning. Alfonso's reply to them was that by doing so they would only embarrass him and hurt Spain.
"You are valuable men where you are because of your experience," he told them."

Falls 30 Feet Flooding Raid.
Trying to escape from policemen who raided a dice game on an upper floor at 2303 Washington avenue at 2:30 o'clock this morning, Frank Daniels, 51-year-old Negro, of 3506 Lawton boulevard, climbed through a window to a second-floor roof and attempted to jump to the roof of the next house. He failed to make it and fell about 30 feet to the ground. At City Hospital
No. 2 he was treated for minor injuries of the back, shoulders and arms, and then he was locked up at the Laclede Avenue Police Station with eight other Negroes and a white man found at the game.

Superlative Quality in Lammert Bedding

IN all the mad maze of price merchandising it is perhaps of interest to learn that Lammert's have built a large Bedding volume strictly on quality lines. Yes, there are still thousands of people who are not satisfied with the "just as good" and who insist on the best.
Naturally then they look to Lammert's to fill their requirements.

Here the ideal of quality is held higher than the appeal of price. Yet it is surprising how little more you pay to get the very finest material and workmanship it is possible to produce.

Take our Hair Inner-Spring Mattress as an example. There is nothing finer made.
It embodies pure white curled hair over the best inner-spring construction; and this is not processed hair, mind you, it is the pure, natural, long curled hair. Carefully and painstakingly this mattress is developed through the various stages, and finally it is encased in a high grade ticking particularly adapted for use with hair. This mattress is priced in the twin size at $77.50 and in full size at $85.00.

Should you desire extra warmth as well as an additional degree of softness, we place a layer of pure lamb's wool over the hair, at no higher cost.
No matter how much money you spend, you could not possibly buy any better construction, but we do cover this mattress in some very exclusive tickings ranging in price for twin or full size up to $450.00.

Lammert's Box Springs complete a perfect combination for luxurious rest. These Box Springs are of the same quality as the mattress, with hair tops. In twin or full size these Box Springs are priced at $60. In specially chosen, exclusive tickings they range as high as $150.

Buying this character of Bedding is like having a suit tailored to measure. Your weight, your preference for a hard or a soft bed, and other factors are carefully catered to. In other words, you obtain exactly what you need.

STRATOSPHERE FLIGHT SPURS EXPERIMENTERS

Rockets and Other Novel Motors Being Tried Out in Germany.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, June 8.—Exploration of the stratosphere is the dream of scientists experimenting in various parts of Germany with rockets, super-altitude airplanes and propulsion motors. The success of Prof. August Picard, Swiss physicist of the University of Brussels, in ascending nearly 10 miles in a balloon has fired them to fresh efforts.

Some of the Germans are seeking first of all scientific data on the nature of the earth's outermost layer of atmosphere. Others are aiming at 10-mile-high rocket planes that would, theoretically, go around the world in 20 minutes.

Still others are interested chiefly in rockets as a means of shooting from city to city, while those with an eye to military uses are tinkering with radio directed rockets as a defense against air raids.

Plane With Airtight Cabin.
While Picard was attaching his airtight aluminum ball to his big balloon at Augsburg the Junkers aircraft works at Dessau was building a super-altitude airplane, with a cabin as airtight as Picard's spherical "basket" and with special devices for supplying oxygen to the plane's crew in the highly rarefied atmosphere 10 miles up. This plane is not expected to do any high speed trans-Atlantic flying, but the data obtained with it will, it is hoped, lay the groundwork for high speed flights through the stratosphere.

Particularly interesting in connection with the Junkers plane, though not directly connected with it, are the rocket-motor experiments of Paul Heylandt.

With Max Valler, another pioneer rocket experimenter, Heylandt last year developed a seven-pound rocket motor capable of propelling an automobile at high speed.

One Experimenter Killed.
Valler was killed by a motor explosion, but Heylandt has continued the experiments and lately announced development of 200 horsepower with a rocket motor weighing only 15 pounds.
This motor looks as simple as a shotgun. Its propulsive force is the recoil resulting from explosion of liquid oxygen and gasoline, ignited at what might be called the "muzzle" of the motor.

Heylandt purposes to keep his rocket motor on an automobile chassis until he has developed it to its highest efficiency, then it can be installed on an airplane designed for stratosphere flying and tried out in high speed long distance work.

At Osnabrueck, Reinhold Tilling has developed a powder rocket which he says can go up like a bullet and glide back to earth like a sailplane.

A Controllable Rocket.
Another experimenter, Johannes Winkler, has demonstrated at Dessau a liquid fuel rocket so easily controllable that its landing point can be calculated with exactness. In Berlin the space-flying enthusiasts have established a "rocket airport" where experiments with seven-foot rockets are being carried on.

With the American, Robert Goddard, backed by the Guggenheim fund experimenting in the United States, with another American, Darwin O. Lyon, attacking the problem in Italy and with scientists in France and Russia also actively interested, there is always a chance that Germany may be only an onlooker when the first successful rocket zooms through the stratosphere.

CAPTURES NEGRO WHO SHOT MEXICO, MO., POLICEMAN

Police Chief Seizes Jesse Lue, Who Offers No Resistance; Officer's Injury Not Serious.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO, Mo., June 8.—Jesse Lue, Negro, who last night wounded Louis McIntyre, Mexico policeman, when McIntyre attempted to arrest him for wounding another Negro, was captured this morning by Chief of Police Floyd Bradley and another policeman. Lue was found at the home of a Negro woman. Although armed with a shotgun he did not offer resistance. McIntyre's condition is not serious.
McIntyre and a fellow officer went to Lue's home and found the front door locked. They started toward the rear door.

Lue was hiding in a shadow as McIntyre passed. Lue fired a shotgun at him, the charge striking McIntyre in the abdomen. The Negro escaped. Lue shot and wounded James Guy, another Negro in a dispute earlier in the evening.

the basement stairs every time the family needs hot water

Must you make those weary trips? No more than you need to carry water from a well.

Let Time-O-Stat be your automatic hot water servant. Enjoy the luxury of all the hot water you need, whenever you need it, and never go near the basement.

Time-O-Stat does not mean an expensive new hot water heater. It is simply low cost attachment to modernize the heater you now have.

When you want hot water, you do not go downstairs. You merely set the Time-O-Stat indicator upstairs in your kitchen or bathroom for the length of time you want the heater to give you hot water. Setting the indicator turns on the heater. When the time is up, Time-O-Stat shuts off the heater automatically. No danger — no gas wasted by forgetting to turn off the heater. Approved by gas companies everywhere.

Why not give yourself this luxury, this step-saving convenience? Its cost is surprisingly low. $5 places Time-O-Stat in your home, the balance in small monthly deposits.

$25,000,000 SAVING IN NAVY IS PLANNED

Secretary Adams Outlines to President Economy Measures for Two Years.

By the Associated Press.
ORANGE, Va., June 8.—President Hoover prolonged his stay at his Rapidan camp until today to obtain as much rest as possible before resuming the work of writing three speeches to be delivered a week hence. He returned to Washington this morning.

Over the week-end, he was advised by Secretary Adams the Navy Department would be able to save about $25,000,000 out of the annual appropriations for this and the next fiscal year.

Savings this year, amounting to about $10,000,000, were made through changes in fleet operations, a reduction of 4800 in enlisted personnel, withdrawal of three battleships, and the decommissioning of a large number of destroyers.

Abandonment of the Island of Guam in the Pacific as a naval station was suggested to Mr. Hoover by naval officials. They said the island had no military value under present defense plans. Withdrawal of all forces, except those needed by the Civil Government, was recommended as an economy measure for next year.

The conference with naval officials was the fifth held with department heads in the chief executive's Government economy campaign.

Next Sunday, Mr. Hoover is scheduled to leave for the Midland to deliver speeches at Indianapolis, Marion, O., and Springfield, Ill.

CANADA, AUSTRALIA IN NEW TRADE PACT

Purpose Is to Develop Commerce Without Hurting Domestic Industry.

By the Associated Press.
OTTAWA, Ontario, June 8.—A trade agreement between Australia and Canada was signed in the respective capitals last week.

A new pact has been under negotiation for some time. H. H. Stevens, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, had several conferences with Parker Moloney, Australian Minister of Markets, in London during the imperial conference and later in Ottawa, when Moloney returned his way of Canada.

The object sought by the two Governments has been to work out a series of preferences which would develop the trade between them without injuring the domestic industries of the two countries.

Much criticism was leveled against the former agreement because of the low duty it provided in Canada on butter. When Canada was not producing all the butter used in this country, import of outside butter brought down Canadian prices approximately to world prices plus the duty. Accordingly an understanding was made with Australia last winter to limit the amount of butter it released on the Canadian market.

In his budget speech Premier Bennett voiced his appreciation for the attitude Australia had taken. Canada expects soon to be on an export basis with respect to butter. So this phase of the agreement will not then be of such immediate importance.

Australia produces many articles, however, which do not compete with Canadian products, including raisins, fruits, etc., and it is argued Canada's imports from that country could be greatly stimulated by preferences and an energetic sales campaign. Canada seeks Australia's market particularly for automobiles, various other manufactured articles, newsprint and lumber.

WOMAN ADMITS SHE PAID $800 TO HAVE HUSBAND SLAIN Latter, Still Alive After Kidnaping, Identifies Suspect Held at Rutherford, N. J.

RUTHERFORD, N. J., June 8.—Police said today Mrs. Alice de Leeuw, 38 years old, had confessed she paid Michael Fedor of Arlington $800 to kill her husband, Bernard de Leeuw, 37, wealthy contractor, William Stock, 27, Passaic, was arrested as a co-conspirator with Fedor. Police say Fedor also confessed.

Mrs. de Leeuw and the two men, are charged with conspiracy to murder. Fedor, a chauffeur, also is charged with highway robbery, extortion and attempt to kill. Police said De Leeuw identified Fedor as one of the two men who seized him and kidnaped him in an automobile two weeks ago and threatened him. He said they robbed him of $53.

Police said Mrs. de Leeuw admitted promising Fedor $8000 to kill her husband. After he paid him $800, they said, Fedor decided to kidnap the contractor in an effort to obtain $15,000.

Fedor was arrested Thursday when he called at a garage where he had instructed De Leeuw to leave $5000 after the contractor protested inability to raise the $15,000.

STEWART HOLDS RED SOX AND BROWNS WIN, 4 TO 0

HALLAHAN, A SPRING LIABILITY, TAKES HIS PLACE AGAIN AS ASSET TO CARDS, WITH SEVENTH VICTORY

By J. Roy Stockton.

Bill Hallahan wrinkled many a brow this spring. Cardinal fans forgot about their other troubles and inquired solicitously and with no small measure of disgust, what was the matter with the left-handed, pug-nosed young man who pitched so brilliantly during the Redbirds' 1930 stretch drive to the National League championship.

Bill was taking his regular turn on the hill, all right, but he also was taking an early shower bath along with each trip to the mound and when April showers brought May flowers and Bill still hadn't pitched a nine-inning game, even the most stout-hearted of the Hallahan boosters began to wonder if Bill had reverted to type of other seasons. And if anybody ankles up with a make-up rule and asks you that type was very much wrong foot, pied, wild and etain shrill.

But wipe away those tears, Dodge and break up that line of pillholders that was forming on the right. It ain't true about the old gray mare. Bill Hallahan is just what he used to be. Take your hand off your Adam's apple. Give your lungs a chance. Thirty-two thousand, four hundred and fifty cash customers who were at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon cannot be wrong and they will tell you that hard work melms at least some fellows and that Hallahan must be several of them.

Yes, indeed, it now appears that Hallahan needed was a little extra work. Rain and cold weather prevented the Cardinal pitchers from working regularly earlier in the season, but double-headers shortened rest intervals between games after the team's return to St. Louis and Hallahan got the work he needed.

Bill hurled his first complete game Thursday evening at the Cardinals, beating them 6 to 5, and yesterday afternoon when Jess Haines, who was scheduled to pitch in the second game of the twin bill with the Robins, did not feel exactly right, Manager Street called on Bill to go his stuff with only two days' rest. And how Bill did perform! He shut out the Robins, 9 to 0, struck out six men and held the enemy to six hits. He issued four bases on balls, but he kept them from doing much to the Cardinals. The team is four games ahead of the Cubs and five in front of the Giants and with Bill able to take a regular turn and journey the nine-inning doubleheaders that have been piled up for the summer months should be stepping stones to a more advantageous position in the race, rather than a hardship.

Bill's shutout victory over the Robins gave the Redbirds an even break in the synthetic doubleheader. Dizzy Vance, pitching in his best form and a shutout hurler except in one inning, beat Burlington Grimes in the first game, 6 to 4. Yesterday's doubleheader included for today, giving the players a rest before tangling again tomorrow in the series final.

JAMESTOWN IS EASY WINNER IN BELMONT RACE

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 8.—In a tune-up for his race with Twenty Grand in the Belmont Stakes next Saturday, George D. Widener's Jamestown today won the Collin purse covering the one and one-eighth miles of mud in 1:52 at Belmont Park. Carrying 124 pounds, two less than he will pack in the Belmont Stakes, the long-striding son of St. James beat Gigantic by four lengths. "Pony" McAtee broke Jamestown on top and before the field of three had gone one-half mile, he was six lengths in front of his two rivals. McAtee then took a hold on the Widener colt and he just breezed along in front, galloping past the judges' stand with his ears perked and his mouth open, fighting for his head. He was the 110-6 favorite.

Al Stillman to Try for Kayo Over Lohman at Battery Tonight

Al Stillman, up-and-coming St. Louis light-heavyweight, will make an attempt to add a knockout to his record when he meets battle-scarred Joe Lohman of Toledo tonight at the Battery A arena. The bout, at 10 rounds, will be the feature of Promoter Jack Tippet's second outdoor card of the season. Thirty-four rounds of boxing are scheduled.

Stillman and Lohman are not strangers in the ring. They fought a hard, bruising fight before a handful of fans at the Gayety Theater last winter, and the two men were so evenly matched that box sports writers and fans were divided on the outcome of the bout.

Since that time Stillman has had an opportunity to increase his ring knowledge, while Lohman, veteran of hundreds of battles, has long since reached the point where his future is behind him. Notwithstanding this fact, Lohman still remains a tough nut for any young boxer to crack, and his fight with Stillman tonight should result in some lively action.

Umpire Emeritus.

ALREADY the wisdom of naming William Harridge president of the American League is apparent. The new executive proved that he is an observer and a thinker by naming Thomas Connolly umpire-in-chief and retiring him from active to supervisory duties.

It is Harridge's thought that the best man to settle the many arguments that center around the umpires is the man who was master umpire of them all. So Connolly will after June 17.

INDUSTRIALS PULL UP THE WEAK RAILS; TRADE QUIET

Market Swings Into Another Rally Easily Overcoming Early Heaviness—Net Gains of 1 to 6 Points in Pivotal Issues.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The stock market swung into another rally today, easily overcoming early heaviness which had centered in the rail issues. Trading was quiet in comparison with the turners of last week, but prices moved up insistently during the afternoon as shorts, discouraged by the quick reversal from the morning trend, began to cover. Sales were less than 2,000,000 shares.

Net gains ranged from one to six points in the pivotal issues. United States Steel closed two points higher at 9 1/2 after an early drop of 2 1/2. American Can was up four and there were advances of three to four in American Telephone, Eastman Kodak, Western Union, Union Carbide, Case, Johns-Manville and Public Service of New Jersey.

Rails made up losses, running to nearly five points, which followed publication of Pennsylvania's first quarter earnings statement. Atchafalaya dropped virtually all of an early drop of 4 1/2. New York Central, after losing 3 1/2, closed three points to the good. Rock Island was up four.

Oil Turn Strong.

Oil turned strong, apparently helped by expectation that merger negotiations between Standard of New Jersey and Standard of California would be encouraged by the Government's decision in the Vacuum-Solco case. New Jersey rallied more than two points.

The afternoon news contained little that was susceptible to bullish interpretation, but the market acquired much of its early rally after the selling on the early reaction had dried up and its ability to rally following a comparatively small reaction from last week's spurt considerably brightened Wall Street.

The German mark was steadier in common with other foreign exchanges. The Berlin Government debt earmarked gold at Paris and some foreign exchange holdings, it was said. Changes in other European rates were very narrow.

There was no appreciable reaction to week-end news on the German situation.

Weekly economic surveys took the view that last week's rally was primarily impelled by technical market conditions. In general, Wall Street circles which warmly welcomed the halt in the three months' decline in New York in an effort to co-ordinate action in the rate question. Meanwhile, a survey of car loadings for the first fortnight in May disclosed a slight improvement in comparison with the first two weeks of April, as related to a year ago. The pickup was most noticeable in the Central Western area.

Money was dull and rates unchanged, call loans renewing at the old 1 1/2 per cent rate.

Two Important Meetings.

Two important railroad meetings scheduled for this week. Executives of Southern roads are to meet in Washington tomorrow to hear a report on the progress made by the Eastern roads in their move for higher freight rates. On Thursday, representatives of the Southern, Southern and Eastern carriers confer in New York in an effort to co-ordinate action in the rate question. Meanwhile, a survey of car loadings for the first fortnight in May disclosed a slight improvement in comparison with the first two weeks of April, as related to a year ago. The pickup was most noticeable in the Central Western area.

Money was dull and rates unchanged, call loans renewing at the old 1 1/2 per cent rate.

PART THREE.

WICKERSHAM BODY RAKES SENATE'S PATRONAGE POLICY

Declares Choice of District Attorneys on Political Grounds Handicaps Law Enforcement.

WOULD RESTRICT GRAND JURIES

Attributes Failure of Courts Largely to Course of Prosecutors — Thinks Their Power Too Great.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 8.—Political interference by the Senate in the appointment of Federal District Attorneys was denounced today by the National Law Observance and Enforcement Commission.

In a report to President Hoover, the Wickersham group said that treating the office of the District Attorney "as a reward for political activity is a serious menace to enforcement of law."

"The claim of the Senate not merely to exercise collective power of rejecting unfit nominations, but to dictate appointments as the patronage of Senators of the state in which the district lies has often had a bad effect upon the personnel and conduct of the office," the commission said. "Alas, in states where the Senators are in opposition to the administration it happens too often that political organizations insist on treating the office as political patronage, and thus deprive the President of the information and support he should have in order to make suitable appointments."

Lays Crime to Prosecutors.
The commission arraigned Federal state and local prosecutors as being more responsible for the growth of crime than the failure of juries to convict.

It also proposed abolition of grand juries, except as a general investigating body for inquiries into the conduct of public officers and in case of large conspiracies.

Its formal recommendations were:

Elimination, so far as may be possible in the American system of government, of political considerations in the selection and appointment of Federal District Attorneys and prosecuting officers and of appointments based upon political activity or service.

Better provision for the selection and tenure of prosecutors in the states and especially for the organization, personnel, tenure and compensation of the staff of the prosecutor's office.

On an organization of the legal profession in each state shall insure competency, character and discipline among those who are engaged in the criminal courts.

Systematic Prosecutions.
A systematic control of prosecutions in each state under a director of public prosecutions or some equivalent official, with secure tenure and concentrated and responsible responsibility.

Provision for legal interrogation of accused persons under suitable safeguards.

The theory that English juries convict to a much greater extent than those in the United States and that there is less escape in England through jury acquittals was discarded by the commission.

Instead, it held that prosecutors are largely responsible and said the great difference between English and American justice "lies in the relatively small number of British cases that are dismissed by means other than jury trial."

"When the number of prosecutions instituted each year has become enormous and beyond the possibilities of proper trial, the power of nolle prosequi as a means of selecting those to be tried makes the prosecutor the real arbiter of what laws shall be enforced and against whom," the report said.

Prosecutor Mightier Than Judge.
"Habitual defenders of criminals have learned to take advantage of this power. Where exercised by assistants under the responsible organization, it lends itself to the quiet choking off of prosecutions under political influence."

"It is an anomaly that the powers and discretion of the Judge, with respect to the small percentage of prosecutions which ever come before him should be so thoroughly hedged about with restrictions, while this power and discretion of the Prosecuting Attorney with respect to disposition of the great majority of initiated prosecutions should remain so absolute."

Asserting police and prosecutors had strongly the need of being able to interrogate suspected persons, the commission said under the present system extra-legal examinations are on continually of persons innocent or unadvised of their rights or without means of employing counsel and making effective protest.

Thus, on one hand, the guaranty of advantage chiefly to the mal-

ST. LOUIS, MONDAY, JUNE 8, 1931.

St. Louis Called 'Ugly Duckling'; Radio Forum Speaker Tells How To Make It 'Glorious White Swan'

Prof. Langsdorf Lists River Front Project, Playgrounds, Outer Parks, Plazas, Strict Zoning and Smoke Abatement.

The generation that gave St. Louis Shaw's Garden, Eads Bridge and Forest Park, and the succeeding commercial generations that let it become an "ugly duckling" were sharply contrasted in yesterday's Community Forum broadcast by KMOX.

Six essential tasks demanding immediate community action to transform it into "a glorious white swan" were listed by Prof. Alexander S. Langsdorf, dean of Washington University School of Engineering and Architecture and vice chairman of the City Plan Commission. E. J. Russell, chairman of the commission, said that, pending completion of those tasks, a traveler passing through St. Louis by train, steamboat or airplane placed first the development of the river front, "substantially in accordance with the ideas proposed by the City Plan Commission."

By train, Russell said, the traveler would notice a hint of the junk yard in property along the rights of way and nothing in the surroundings of Union Station to prevent his wondering "Why St. Louis?"

By river he "would be thrilled by Eads' inspiring bridge," see miles of industries and railroad yards, and get his most pleasing impression at Chain of Rocks.

By airplane he would be startled by the smoke pall, notice the sooty drabness of the buildings and wonder at the effect of the smoke on human beings, observe "a woe-laden, sad, and depressing beauty where it is sadly needed, in a way that will give to the city a place of distinction as a community that attaches some importance to spiritual values."

What Visitor Might See.
"If he should decide to become a visitor," Russell continued, "his opinion might be greatly modified. He would be thoroughly charmed by a number of the residential districts, although he would wonder at the miniature size of each of them. He could go to Forest Park, take in Jefferson Memorial with its Lindbergh trophies, enjoy the Art Museum, be interested in the zoological garden and be quite impressed with the varied facilities for recreation, whether it be golf, tennis or picnics."

"He could go to Shaw's Garden and spend several happy hours in viewing the vegetation collected from all parts of the world. He could go downtown and become interested in some of the buildings, and if his wife were along she would find it a wonderful place to shop."

"If he were of an inquiring turn of mind and would find that Eads Bridge, which he greatly admired, was built about 60 years ago. He could imagine the feelings of Capt. Eads if he should look over the scene today and find that the approaches to the bridge on either side of the river would be left behind, and that it would be small consolation to Eads that other bridges that have been built since have no better treatment."

"He would find that Forest Park was acquired about the time the bridge was completed, would admire greatly the foresight and courage that it took to secure them for the benefit of future generations, but would be unable to answer Mr. Leffingwell's question as to how soon there would be as many buildings as trees in the park."

The New Botanical Garden.
"He would learn that Henry Shaw was an outstanding citizen who gave to the city Tower Grove Park and also the Botanical Garden that bear his name, and he would probably share in Mr. Shaw's chagrin when he realized that the city that has grown up around the garden and the park has endangered the lives of many of its treasures and made it imperative to build a new botanical garden miles away from the city."

"He would be struck by the fact that the generation that succeeded Shaw, Leffingwell and Eads had evidently devoted itself so exclusively to commerce that it did little if anything to enhance the natural advantages of St. Louis. Some of them, it is true, did acquire paintings and ultimately willed them to the public. The sons of these successful business men were so satisfied with the results of their fathers' efforts that they proceeded to enjoy themselves and utterly ignored their obligations to their birthplace."

"Today there is an increasing infactor of means or with organization behind him, the report held, and on the other hand tempt criminal investigators and prosecutors constantly to unlawful means of enforcing the law."

Doing Away With "Third Degree."
It recommended a legal examination of accused persons before a magistrate, where counsel could be present to protect the defendant's rights, where the evidence could be taken down with guarantees of accuracy, and the abuses of the "third degree" obviated. It added, however, that this would require general constitutional amendments.

The grand jury was criticized as uneconomic and, in most cases, unnecessary.

PORTO RICAN INDEPENDENCE DEMANDED IN RESOLUTION

Unionist Party Declares for Republic, Asserting That Rule by U. S. Is a Failure.
By the Associated Press.
SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 8.—The Unionist Party, until two years ago the most powerful in the island, today adopted a policy of complete independence for Porto Rico and declared for the establishment of a republic. Its resolution charged that American government in the island is a failure. The resolution also declared Porto Rico was the only Spanish-American community deprived of its liberty and sovereignty. It added that the protest must reach not only the American people but "all peoples belonging to our race."

Delegates favoring autonomy as a preliminary step to complete independence were defeated by a vote of 104 to 68. The rejected resolution favored acceptance of the liberalization of local government from the United States, pending attainment of their ultimate aspirations.

CASTS OF INDIAN RELICS GIVEN TO MISSOURI MUSEUM

Replica of 35-Found Ceremonial Ax Among Donations From Kansas City Collector.
By the Associated Press.
JEFFERSON CITY, June 8.—J. G. Bracklein, Kansas City, collector of Indian relics, has presented to the Missouri State Museum with reproductions of three of his best Missouri stone instruments used by the aborigines of this state. The implements are the only ones of their size and shape ever found in Missouri.

These casts were made by the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., where a duplicate set is now on display. The exhibit includes a long, tapered spear, found between Tipton and California, Mo., a rare fluted ax similar to Wisconsin specimens, but a typical Missouri type, found half way between Kansas City and Columbia, and an exact reproduction of the largest Indian ax ever found, the original of which was sold by Bracklein to the Illinois State Museum for $600.

MOSCOW, June 8.—The Soviet Foreign Office announces it has forwarded a passport visa for the Rev. John Haynes Holmes of New York to enter Russia.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 8.—The Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Community Church, who planned to visit Russia the latter part of this month, said last Thursday he had been barred by Soviet authorities from entering the country. The reported action caused surprise here, since Dr. Holmes' views on international affairs have always been of a liberal nature.

'DEFENDERS OF CIVIL LIBERTY'

Liberals Seek Citizenship for Pacifists, Birth Control Legislation.
By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 8.—Seeking among other things enactment of legislation to admit pacifists to citizenship and repeal of a Federal law forbidding dissemination of birth control information, 125 representatives of 30 liberal organizations met today to plan joint action for a nationwide "defense of civil liberties."

Other objectives included liberation of Mooney and Billings in California and I. W. W. prisoners in Washington State, passage of a Federal anti-injunction bill, Russian recognition by the United States and freedom for the Philippines.

REPORT UPHOLDS MOSLEM TITLE TO WALLING WALL

Commission Named by Great Britain Declares Jews Should Have Access to It for Prayer.

POLITICAL SPEECHES NEARBY FORBIDDEN

Disputes Over the Historic Structure in Jerusalem
Have Led to Fatal Rioting.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, June 8.—The Government commission appointed to adjudicate differences between Moslems and Jews over right to the use of the Walling Wall at Jerusalem for devotional purposes today ruled that sole ownership of the wall is vested in the Moslems. At the same time the commission held that the Jews should have free access to the wall for purposes of devotion at all times under definite conditions regarding appropriateness of worship.

It is stipulated that the Jews shall not blow the ram's horn near the wall nor cause any avoidable disturbance, and that the Moslems must not annoy the Jews during their devotions.

Personnel of Board.

The commission, created by the British Government in May, 1930, with the approval of the League of Nations council, consists of Charles Harde, a Swiss; Ello Loeffler, former Swedish Foreign Minister, and A. Van Kempen, former Dutch colonial official. They spent a month in Palestine taking evidence.

By today's ruling the Jews on their days of worship may place near the wall the cabinet ark containing the scrolls of the law, the table on which the ark stands. These may be used on special fast days or days of public prayer ordered by the chief rabbis of Jerusalem, on the Jewish New Year, and on the Day of Atonement.

Restriction on Moslems.

The temple stipulates that Moslems shall not construct, repair or demolish any building adjacent to the wall in such manner as to encroach on the pavement or to interfere with the Jews during devotional acts.

Political speeches or demonstrations of any kind near the wall are prohibited and the report states that it should be a matter of common interest to both parties that the pavement be kept clean and the wall not be disfigured. Because of its character as a historical monument, maintenance of the wall is entrusted to the Palestine administration.

The walling wall of Jerusalem is said to be the only remaining part of the western exterior of the ancient temple of Solomon, destroyed by the Babylonians, restored by Ezra and Nehemiah, torn down by Titus in 70 A. D. and cherished in memory by the Jews through the ages.

Periodically Jews gather to lament the destruction of the temple. The Moslems, contending that the wall was their property, appealed to the Mandates Commission of the League of Nations three years ago to prevent encroachment by the Jews. At that time, restrictions were placed on the appearances permitted in the Jewish ceremonies.

EX-KANSAS GETS LENIN AWARD

By the Associated Press.
MOSCOW, June 8.—Joseph MacDowell, former Kansas agronomist, today was awarded the order of Lenin, one of the highest decorations bestowed by the Soviet Government. He was one of 42 agriculturalists on whom the decoration was bestowed. MacDowell has been stationed since 1928 on the great Yundub State Farm in Northern Caucasus. He has been in Russia for eight years.

The order of Lenin carries a salary increase of 30 rubles (about $15) a month, a 25 per cent reduction in house rent, and a railway pass at any point in Soviet Russia and three street car tickets. The children of those who possess the order are ranked as "children of workers." MacDowell is the first American to receive the decoration.

24 Per Cent Gain in Reforestation.
WASHINGTON, June 8.—Nearly 10,000 agencies, Federal and State Governments, schools and colleges, industrial and civic organizations and individuals, planted 138,970 acres to forests last year, a gain of 24 per cent over 1929. These plantings brought the total of lands reforested to 1,798,045 acres.

Columbia U. Economist Says U. S. Can Get Out of Depression And Must to Avoid Upheavals

Dr. Leo Wolman Advocates Bond Issue of Three to Five Billion for Public Works, Principally Road-Building.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

EXPERT WITH PLAN TO BEAT DEPRESSION

NEW YORK, June 8.—What this country needs today, says Dr. Leo Wolman, professor of economics at Columbia University, is an end to timidity and inaction on the part of the Federal Government and the adoption of a bold and constructive program for leading the United States out of the economic depression.

Specifically, Dr. Wolman believes—and he says the same belief is held by the great majority of the professional economists of the country—that the Government should float a bond issue of from $3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000, to be spent as quickly as possible on the construction of public works, principally roads.

Leo Wolman is recognized as one of the outstanding economists of the United States. Besides Columbia, he has taught at Hobart College, Johns Hopkins, the University of Michigan and the School for Social Research. He did research work for the War Industries Board, was attached to the American Peace Mission at Paris after the war, and in 1921 was a member of the Advisory Committee to the President's unemployment conference at Washington.

He brings to bear on economic problems not only a theoretical knowledge, but the day-by-day practical experience he has gained as the economic adviser to the Amalgamated Clothing Makers of America. The writer interviewed him at his office in the Amalgamated Bank Building.

Forces Not Beyond Control.

To begin with, he scouted the idea that the depression in the United States was due solely to world forces over which we had no control. He was equally impatient with the defeatist theory that our recovery must wait upon the recovery of the rest of the world.

"We were a contributing factor in the world depression," he said. "Calling it a world depression does not absolve us of responsibility. We are part and parcel of it. I agree thoroughly with Dr. Donham that we can lift ourselves out and in so doing contribute to world revival."

Dr. Wolman was referring at this point to the views of Dean Wallace B. Donham of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, as expressed in his book, "Business Adrift," and in a subsequent interview published in the Post-Dispatch.

Dr. Wolman believes we should look forward to the creation of an agency for the control of business and industry, with a view to preventing depressions in the future, but that no such agency could be developed fast enough to be of service in the present emergency.

Meantime, he sees an imperative need for prompt and decisive action through the instrumentalities already at our command. He is convinced that the situation calls for a bold stroke by the Federal Government. He feels that the Government's sense of responsibility to the people should lead it to make an immediate and positive "play for revival."

Repeating a warning he gave in a recent address, he said: "Before the problems created by this depression, the normal preoccupations of politics and industry sink into insignificance. As long as it lasts we may expect rising deficits in the treasuries of the local and Federal Governments and the creation of additional areas of danger among the nations of the world. A policy of inaction will only tend to perpetuate present conditions."

Tells What U. S. Should Do.

Coming to the question of what practical steps might be taken to end the depression in the United States, Dr. Wolman said:

"You ask whether we know, after all our generations of study, how to get a revival under way. There is one thing that most economists are agreed on. They believe that when a depression has lasted for a long time, when there has been as complete and devastating a liquidation as there has been in this depression, then the best possible step that can be taken to initiate recovery is to create a new basis for such an armistice and give the ne-

BOTH SIDES TRYING TO PATCH UP TRUCE

"Congregations" Com-

ROME, June 8.—Suspension of church construction throughout Italy is understood today to be the Vatican's latest counter-move in the controversy with Premier Mussolini.

The expenditure of many millions in the erection of nearly 2000 buildings in Vatican City and other districts was said to have ceased on orders from Pope Pius XI. Construction already under way will be completed.

This move was considered significant inasmuch as the building of new churches is known to be close to the Pope's heart. He recently discussed his program with Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, telling him that building was one of the best remedies for unemployment in the Catholic world.

On the other hand, the Vatican has announced that the reorganization of Catholic Youth clubs, the closing of which was the root of the controversy, is going forward in the form of "congregations." While their locations were withheld, it was learned that they were being formed in strict adherence to Fascist law and would be more closely related to the church than the former groups.

A spirit of optimism pervaded the Vatican in regard to the solution of the conflict with the Government although no concrete developments were known to have taken place. The Pope spent all day Sunday in conference with his departmental heads.

It was thought possible that the Government might have answered secretly the Papal notes of protest concerning the dissolution of Catholic Action and attacks by Fascist adherents.

Persons in a position to know said the diplomats negotiating informally were trying to patch up a temporary truce rather than a permanent settlement of differences between the church and the State, since the issues in dispute are regarded as too important for quick solution.

Reorganization of the Catholic clubs as "congregations," it is thought, may provide the basis for such an armistice and give the ne-

Fishing and the Minnow Seine.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ONE of the serious causes of vanishing fish foods is the free use of the minnow seine, especially during spring and summer. If numbers destroyed matter, regardless of size, one minnow seine in the hands of a bait dealer will kill in the year more fish than all the giggers of the Ozarks combined will destroy in a like period.

Dragging a minnow seine over gravel bars and creek bottoms, teeming with nests of many varieties of fish, is to demolish countless millions of eggs, fry and minnows. Because fish eggs are invisible to the unobservant eye, and fry, ever present in gravel and silt, are hidden from observation, their wholesale slaughter is unnoticed. In the meantime, a great howl goes up concerning the comparatively few large fish taken by hook or gill—fish that, because of the vast number of smaller ones remaining, should be removed. There is no argument for retaining fish that have spawned and are ready for the skillet.

Fish enemies should also be considered. Turtles, gar, reptiles and large fish, particularly catfish, are among the most destructive fish enemies, accounting for a greater mortality among fish than all human agencies combined. Yet, not only is there no effort made looking to their eradication, but many of our well meaning laws actually protect them.

Fifty years ago, when fish were abundant, seining with two-inch mesh, noodling and gigning were common practices. Fish thus taken were ready for the frying pan and with these edible fish vast numbers of predatory creatures were destroyed. Each year an annual fish crop was gathered and the streams left in better shape for next season, well stocked with innumerable fry. Fish multiply astonishingly. A female bass will spawn from 1000 to 10,000 eggs in a season; other fish as numerous—even more so. Suckers may go as high as 500,000 eggs each. After spawning season, every stream and pond is denuded by millions of young fish, fry of various sorts. What a ridiculous idea it is to conserve adult fish at the expense of numerous offspring.

Fish grow rapidly. A bass under favorable conditions may reach a pound in six months from an egg. Under unfavorable conditions, the fish may not reach two ounces in the same length of time. Laws regulating fishermen, limiting their creel and interfering with the manner of taking matured fish, are worse than useless. Hatcheries have small benefits. Distributing fish to streams unsuited and already teeming with aquatic life as dense as food conditions permit is merely grandstand play.

Trout propagation in the Ozarks, with but 42 miles of suitable streams against 4000 miles adapted to native varieties, is a joke.

If our Ozark fisheries are to be restored to former abundance, the Game and Fish Department should be placed under scientific management, politics eliminated and wholesome laws enacted. The reason for fish scarcity lies far deeper than the mere regulation of fishermen. We are steadily drifting into deeper trouble while our ill-advised Isaak Walton are applying fruitless remedies.

Would Dump Wheat Into Sea.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AS long as wheat and cotton are low in price, no improvement in business can be expected, and as long as the Farm Board (another noble experiment) is in existence, conditions will become worse. The wheat now owned by the Farm Board should be sealed up, dumped into the ocean or sent to China. Brazil, faced with a similar situation, has decided to dump 40,000 bags of coffee into the sea. Cotton controlled by the Farm Board should be kept in Government warehouses for at least three years (cotton will not easily deteriorate) or until such time when the South cannot raise enough for the demand.

RUSSIA IN THE FAR EAST.

While America and the European nations are troubled about Russia's plans to invade their markets, Soviet Russia is opening a vast field of commerce in Western and Northern China. The Russian plans for some time past have been regarded as mainly political. Its communist propaganda seemed to be the most vigorous and dangerous game, and the Soviet at least succeeded in creating chaos and thus largely destroying capitalist trade in many parts of China, chiefly in the southern and central provinces.

Advices from Manchuria, however, indicate that while Russia may continue underground propaganda in China proper, she is working chiefly now to penetrate Northern and Western China commercially. Since the little war between Russia and China over the Chinese Eastern Railway, Sino-Russian relations in Manchuria have greatly improved for Russia. It was a short war, without much destruction on either side. The Russian armies conducted themselves as well as compared with the Chinese, that Russia is popular in Northern Manchuria. She has more than regained her half control of the Chinese Eastern Railway, because she has filled her half of the places in the railway with fairly well trained and experienced employees who are thoroughly loyal to the Soviet and who at any time the Chinese cause trouble can be withdrawn in a body and thus completely paralyze the railroad's operation. The Soviet Government is selling goods in Manchuria at prices beyond competition by other foreign countries, even by the Chinese.

But Russia has larger plans. Through the new railway built from the Trans-Siberian Railway, near the border of Sinkiang, to Tashkent, she can easily penetrate into Northern and Western China. The railway carries within a reasonable distance of Urumchi, the capital of Sinkiang. From there trade penetration is rather difficult on account of the lack of good roads. Experiments have been made with motor trucks, but without much success, so that most of the trade must be carried on by caravans into the interior of China and into India. Nevertheless, it is a good starting point, and the details can be worked out later. The Soviet has already established dominant influence in Outer Mongolia, and is now penetrating Inner Mongolia, and, as we have said, through the Chinese Eastern Railway to Northern Mongolia. The route by way of the railway to Tashkent opens some of the richest Chinese provinces in mineral and other natural resources. They are potentially very rich, and eventually Russia will have a vast and fruitful field for industrial and commercial development. With means of communication and the cheap labor at the Soviet Government's command, competition by capitalist nations will be practically impossible. The Soviet is on the caravan route to Peking. The trade in that region now is not quite as big as Russia's trade with Persia, on the other side, but it is increasing continually.

In dealing with the Chinese, Russia can not only use peaceful methods effectively, but force at little cost. She found out in her Manchurian war how little force is necessary to accomplish her ends with the Chinese. Not more than 5000 Russian troops crossed the border of Manchuria to put an end to the conflict over the Chinese Eastern Railway, and the destruction of life on both sides was almost negligible. It was more a show of force on the part of Russia than the actual use of it. Of course, the ultimate results of this commercial penetration depend largely on the success of the five-year plan. How long that will take, how long it will be before efficiency is attained, if ever, is a matter of conjecture. Russia at the present time is getting results so far as she is able to produce the goods.

It is not a propitious time to judge of results, because Manchuria and the other provinces contiguous to Russia in the north and west are suffering from the present depression which prevails all over the world. Agriculture is at a low ebb. The great migration from China proper to Manchuria has been greatly reduced. The market for soy beans, the chief product of this vast region, is glutted, so that the usual exports and imports are practically at a standstill. Yet Russia is selling goods, and when prosperity returns her opportunities will greatly increase.

Soviet Russia is a factor which must be dealt with, not only in this country and in Europe but the Far East. Whether or not she continues her political propaganda, whether or not she gains much more success beyond the chaos she has caused, the Western nations will have to face her trade competition in all the vast territory in Western Asia, probably in China proper.

TREES, BOYS AND BASEBALL PLAYERS.

Our pick of recent news features comes from Fort Smith, Ark. When 16 boys were taken into Municipal Court for climbing trees to watch a baseball game, Judge J. A. Gallagher dismissed them with a generous blessing. "I wouldn't give a dime" he said, "for a boy that wouldn't climb a tree to see a ball game if he didn't have the price of a ticket in his pocket." Laws, he reminded the policeman, are made by men, but "God creates trees, boys and baseball players." In other words, Joyce Kilmer told only a third of the story. If we know anything about neighborhood baseball, Judge Gallagher deserves an honorary place on every vacant lot roster in the country. The captains had better get busy and sign him up. He looks to us like a good utility man and it is a cinch he can hit in the pinches.

ROAST BEEF, RARE.

It is going to be good form again to order roast beef, rare, in the old stentorian accents, and to eat it with the gusto of happier days. The meat eaters are planning to parade the cities with plumes and banners, to preach their gospel in print and posters, to shout their vigorous faith from the houseposts. Only the senile souls that nibble on lettuce and gorge on spinach can doubt the triumph of this righteous crusade.

The vegetarians have had a fair trial. Like Canute, they have "reigned for years a score." Their dictatorship, however, did not come into full, intolerant bloom until prohibition slithered into the Constitution. Prohibition may not have reduced the volume of drinking appreciably, but it has surely blighted the prowess of eating. Have we not all seen one-time trenchermen behave like mere dilettantes at the table since the name of Volstead became, so to speak, a common noun? Compare the ham sandwich of the late Wayne Wheeler's bright college years at Oberlin with the water-like specter that masquerades as such today. The simple truth is that a good, honest, man's-size appetite, once the normal thing, is now almost taboo. The reason for this is plain enough to any serious student of gastronomy. The disappearance of the Martini cocktail explains it all. The connoisseurs may be right about the Martini. There may be disaster as well as dynamite in its amber depths. But one, or two, or, if you really insist, three, and men were meat eaters of noble capacity, and the piping voice of the vegetarian was not heard in the land.

If we are to return to the ham and eggs of vanished marmoreal dawns, to the deep, sizzling steaks and magnificent roasts of ancient dinners; if we are, in a word, to recapture the golden age of good living and escape from the Barmedical feasts of a fading philosophy, we shall have to reinstate the epicurean trinity—eat, drink and be merry.

EUROPE'S GORDIAN KNOT.

Germany's declaration that her reparations are unbearable, which amounts practically to a demand that they be reduced, revives a question that we had considered settled by the Young plan in 1929, and our separate agreement with Germany.

It is not settled. We are entangled in the Gordian knot of European finances whether we wish it so or not, and what happens to Germany will affect the United States no matter how we seek to avoid it. Chancellor Brüning and President von Hindenburg declare that Germany's purchasing power is curtailed by the reparations payments she is obliged to make and that her selling power is restricted by the tariff walls that other countries have erected against her. The limit of privation has been reached, they say, and the Young plan has failed to bring the relief promised.

The Young plan provided for 58 annual payments by Germany to the Allies, the total of these payments being about $9,000,000,000. The separate agreement with the United States called for the payment of over $15,000,000 a year for 37 years and over $9,000,000 a year for 15 years after that, the total being about $700,000,000. With internal debts and problems of her own greatly increasing the demands upon her, and with the restrictions upon her trade that have been mentioned, her Chancellor and President unite in declaring that she cannot bear the burden, and that the financial strain that ruined the German mark, impoverishing those who held it, is now about to be repeated to the ruin of German industry. These results, they say, will produce another bankruptcy from which their creditors, who have already pared down their debt, will lose the remainder of it.

Such a condition, many fear, will bring communism to Germany, and our experience with Russia has indicated that it is difficult for foreign countries to collect of a Communist government debts incurred under either a monarchical or a democratic regime. The only sums the United States has collected upon the debt of Russia were paid by the Kerensky regime; none has been paid by the present Communist government.

The United States, like the rest of Europe, is facing a new problem in Germany. There has always been the old question as to Germany's ability to pay her debts under normal post-war conditions which are always bad for conquered and conqueror alike. There is now the super-problem as to her ability to do so in an unemployed and tariff-warring world.

CANADIAN SPELLING.

Now that the Canadian Historical Association has joined the Royal Society and the Canadian Geographic Society in urging that Canada use England's style of spelling, another campaign against a United States product may be expected. Tariff walls can keep goods from our fields and factories, but an embargo on orthography is more difficult. Canadian reformers may labour with great vigour to enforce the advertised splendour of Oxford spelling, they may haul offenders to gaol in a wagon with steel tyres, imprison them on the top story and fine them a sizable cheque, but we will be surprised if their endeavour succeeds. Mr. Roosevelt tried to reform our spelling 25 years ago, but he couldn't get his innovation past the public printer, Congress rose in rebellion and the people laughed him out of court. Canada may be part of the Empire, but she shares the rules of spelling found on this side of the border, despite the learned societies' earnest efforts. We're from Missouri, and they'll have to show us.

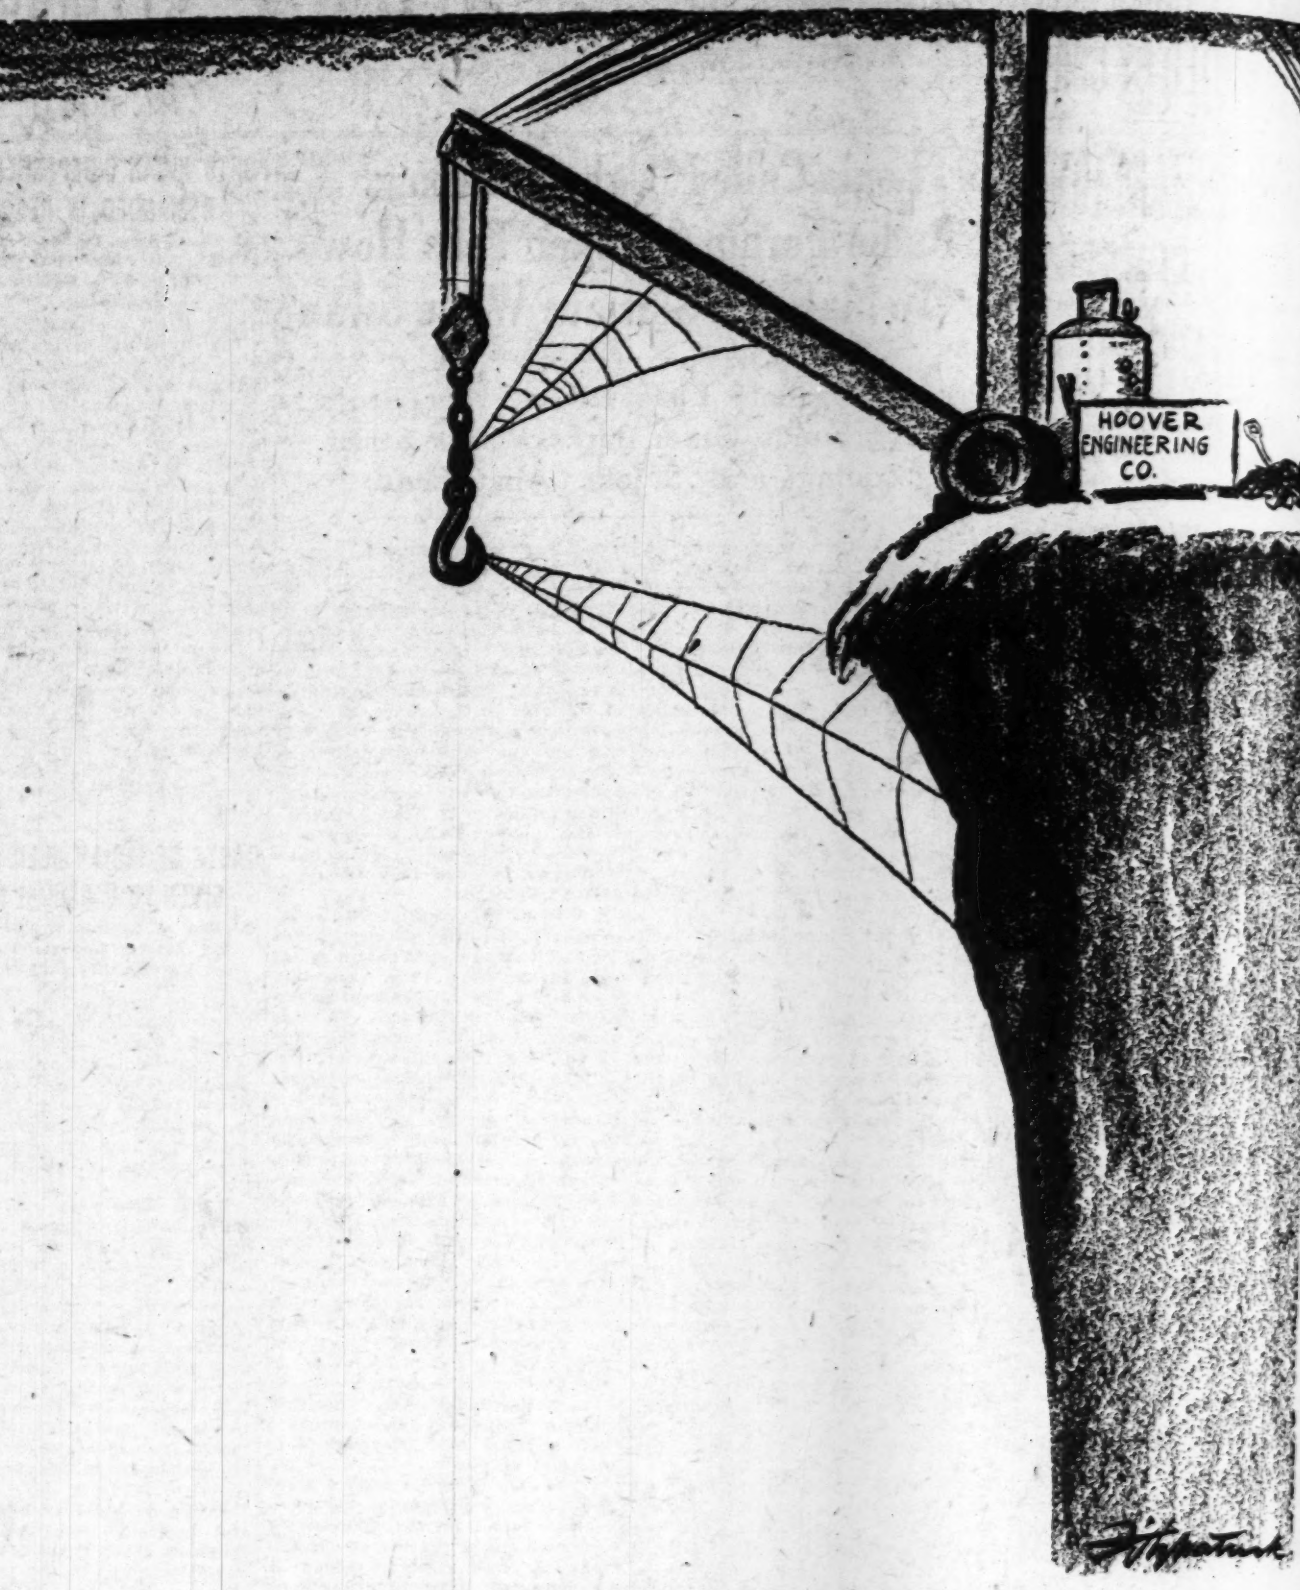

CAPONE FACES LEAVENWORTH.

Alphonse Capone, king of Chicago bootlegging, gambling and vice rings, otherwise known as Public Enemy No. 1, now faces the looming prospect of Leavenworth. Already under six months' sentence for contempt of Federal court, Capone has been indicted for failing to make income tax returns over a period of six years. It would be a grim jest if a man who, by popular reputation, has committed nearly every major crime against society, should at last come to the end of his rope because he did not share his swag with the Government. What a commentary it is on local law enforcement that we must depend upon the Federal Government to rid us of an arch-criminal on charges that, compared with other accusations, are a mere slap on the wrist!

For seven or eight years, since the killing of Diamond Jim Colosimo and the departure of Johnny Torrio left Capone alone in his chieftaincy, it has been a matter of common knowledge that he is the leader of a band of killers. Yet the only "time" he has ever done was a year in a Pennsylvania penitentiary, to which he was summarily sentenced when arrested on the streets of Philadelphia for carrying a concealed weapon. Chicago police and prosecuting authorities, under the circumstances, must be judged incompetent or corrupt, or both. In Chicago, Capone has not only gone armed himself, but is always surrounded by a body of armed bravos, but in this, as in other violations of law, he has gone unmolested.

Due allowance should be made, of course, for the fact that Capone's activities are in a new dimension. He is no ordinary criminal, and his methods for concealing his deeds are undoubtedly difficult to combat. Yet what could be more difficult than the task the Government agents undertook, namely, to discover Capone's income during the past five years? If it has been successful, and Capone's forthcoming trial will answer that, it will show that the brains, ingenuity and persistence of Federal officials have hurdled a seemingly insurmountable obstacle. If it is possible to uncover the deeply guarded secret of Capone's income, it is also possible to uncover information that would lead to his conviction for other crimes.

From Hollywood comes a story of a movie actress who broke 15 windows, wrecked a house and knocked out a man with one slipper. What could that girl have done with both feet!

ALL QUIET AT VALLEY FORGE.

Germany's Attitude on Disarmament

Disarmed by Versailles treaty in which other nations pledged similar action for peace, Germany naturally wants to see those promises kept; on victor nations' acceptance of facts depends success of 1932 conference and prestige of League; Lloyd George and other Allied leaders have pointed out dangers of continuing policy of prudence.

By Admiral Paul Behncke (Retired), of the German Navy.

The writer of this article was a Rear Admiral in the German Imperial Navy, and took part in the battle of Jutland. Later he was head of the German Republic's Navy Department. He visited St. Louis in 1927 on a tour of the United States.

THERE exists, as all the world knows, a vast difference between the views on disarmament held by the victor states, in particular France, and those held by the defeated and neutral countries under the moral leadership of Germany. The divergence is, indeed, so great that the disarmament conference to take place in 1932 will find it a difficult task to reconcile the two standpoints and to establish an effective basis for international disarmament.

Whatever course the negotiations may take, one thing is certain, namely, that the outcome of the conference will be regarded as a criterion of the efficiency of the League of Nations and will determine public opinion as to the covenant. However, since the success or failure of the conference will turn in one direction or another the current of events and of the cultural development of Europe, as well as of the whole world, it would be unwise to allow the impediments and obstacles raised by France and her satellite states to damp our ardor. On the contrary, the cause is one in which a sound optimism is of the greatest value—an optimism admitting no doubts that the League will prove itself worthy of its design and destiny.

The League was cradled in the idea of peace. Its very origin presupposed real disarmament. Its covenant, which, as an integral part of the treaty of Versailles, is both morally and legally—doubtfully binding upon its signatories, contains, in Article 8, an obligation for all to disarm for the realization of international co-operation, for which purpose it states "that the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligations."

As a prelude to this disarmament, Germany has been completely disarmed, in pursuance of a scheme worked out by the best military minds of the Allies. It is to be remembered that, in a covering note, Clemenceau assured Germany that her disarmament would be followed by disarmament of all the other contracting states. If, therefore, Germany demands the disarmament of these as completely as she herself has disarmed, such a demand accords not only with the sense of justice felt by humanity but also with the solemn promise of her ex-enemies.

These promises have been frequently reiterated since the conclusion of peace. As recently as last January, Briand declared in the League Council that the obligations assumed under Article 8 of the covenant are sacred and that no Government could dare to repudiate them. Addressing the House of Lords in 1926 and again at the meeting of the League of Nations Union at Brussels this year, Lord Cecil declared absolute and effective disarmament to be imperatively required under existing treaties. Germany, he added, has not only a moral but also a legal right to demand international disarmament.

Similar utterances have been made by Henderson, by Grandi and by military leaders of Germany's former enemies, including the American Gen. Allen and the British Gen. Hamilton.

A British officer, Maj. B. C. Denning, and the French Gen. de Cugnot have stated that the present situation, in which Germany has disarmed and remains surrounded by other Powers armed to the teeth, renders her liable to sudden attack. The French General remarked expressly: "A disarmed country forms a temptation to the others." Again, in the British upper house last January, Lord Dickinson, having expressed himself in similar terms, drew the conclusion that no nation could be expected to tolerate such a situation.

It has been stated above that the League of Nations will stand or fall according as the disarmament conference proves a success or a failure. In support of this view, one might quote men of such recognized international repute and well balanced judgment as Stresemann. If it should be objected that, as a German, that statesman was ex parte and therefore spoke pro deo, other authorities, even among the Allies, can be cited as holding similar opinions. Lord Cecil, for instance, stated last December that, should the conference fail to produce an agreement restricting armaments of all kinds as effectively as the League, under Article 8 of the covenant and as already carried out by Germany, international peace would be shaken to its very foundations.

Again, in January, 1930, Lloyd George in a highly informative essay expressed himself in similar terms; nor did he hesitate to refer directly to those countries whose intrigues had hitherto balked the realization of international disarmament. He wrote literally: "But France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania have so far persistently refused to fulfill the promise which all the victor states gave in the peace treaty forced upon the German Reich. This is a common subterfuge which, sooner or later, will certainly lead to an international conflict."

Germany's right to expect others to disarm as thoroughly as she has been required to do is derived from the fact, not merely that she has set an example of radical disarmament, but that, prior to joining the League of Nations, she co-operated in making preparations for general disarmament and endeavored to promote the preparatory conferences by making and supporting such proposals as her own practical experience had shown to be likely to effect any real general disarmament and to serve the interests of the League of Nations and of international peace.

If, notwithstanding the non-realization of the expectations aroused by the Locarno agreement and the Kellogg pact in regard to disarmament, Germany continues to co-operate, she does so in the hope that the nations will not longer put up with the promises and pretenses that have been practiced for the past 12 years, but that the fulfillment of the obligations entered into will be categorically demanded.

American Wheat for Americans

From the New York Times.

IT is evident that a world agreement about wheat exports could not be reached at the London conference. This failure is due partly, but not wholly, to the attitude of the American delegates. Their instructions did not permit them to assent to a general "pooling" of the world's surplus wheat. Nor could they enter into any plan to assign "quotas" to different countries. Their sole recommendation was to reduce the acreage devoted to the growing of wheat.

Russia and other wheat-growing countries would not adopt this remedy, and, indeed, might have pointed out that the attempt to apply it in the United States had met with almost no success. For some years the Department of Commerce, and later the Farm Board, have been exhorting American farmers to diversify their crops and grow less wheat. But the advice has had slight effect. In Kansas, for example, where it has been assiduously given, the acreage under wheat cultivation is reported to be larger than ever, and the prospective harvest is the largest on record in that State.

In view of such facts, the recent statement that the Government sees "hope" for American wheat in the American home market seems almost ironical. For years on end we have been growing millions of bushels of wheat beyond the domestic consumption. During the last 12 or 13 years the exportable surplus has averaged something like 200,000,000 bushels annually. If this cannot be sold abroad in large part, what is to become of it?

That question is already acute in our agricultural world, and promises to become more so as the Farm Board ceases to stir in as the god from the machine and buy up the surplus wheat, only to store it away, though hoping to sell a few cargoes of it abroad from time to time. The prospect, cannot be said to be flattering, either financially or politically. If surplus continues to be piled on surplus, the pressure on Congress to "do something" for the wheat farmers will be fiercer than ever.

From the first it was plain that our special difficulty about wheat could not be disposed of at the London conference. Our delegation went there with a single proposal, which it might have been known in advance would not be approved by Russia and other European nations. The inevitable result is to bring upon us fresh reproaches because we seem never to be willing, in the phrase of Mr. Gladstone, to "throw our minds into the common pool." Perhaps we might have given less offense if we had taken no part in the conference at all. It left us just where we should have been had we not gone—namely, with the task on our hands of disposing of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat more than we can eat. Yet the optimism at Washington perceives "hope" in that situation!

ST. LOUIS OPERA AND KANSAS CITY.

From the Kansas City Times.

ANOTHER St. Louis summer opera season of 12 weeks has opened. This fact is interesting far beyond the city itself, because the summer opera an established municipal enterprise, it concerns a large territory for which the entertainment is accessible, and has given a certain distinction to the community fostering this delightful form of summer diversion. Many Kansas City residents have been highly entertained by St. Louis opera and invariably have been impressed with the thought that Kansas City well might emulate its neighbor.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 8. THIS month will turn out into the world many thousands of young men and women with college diplomas. On the whole they are probably better equipped to meet the problems of life than were their predecessors. They have been required to do a large amount of intellectual work. The courses of study pursued in order to secure a degree are a little more difficult and exacting than those of former years. They could not have been graduated without subjecting themselves to a great deal of severe mental discipline.

While they will have a little better chance in the world than others they will not have the only chance. They will not be judged by their diplomas but by what they produce. As the years pass some of them will discover that they put too much emphasis in their student days on how to get a living and not enough on how to live. Even if they do not appear so successful in the competition for gain, those who have a background of liberal culture have a satisfaction that wealth cannot buy. One great benefit of a college education is a better appreciation of the real values of life.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

FASHIONABLE wedding of this afternoon will be that of Miss Almira Steedman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Harrison Steedman, 32 Westmoreland place, and Richard Baldwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Warrington Baldwin, 21 Westmoreland place. The ceremony will take place at 5:30 o'clock at St. Peter's Episcopal Church before an altar profusely decorated with Easter lilies and cymodendron fern. Clusters of ferns and banks of lilies will be interspersed with six large vases of Easter lilies to form a background for the bride party. The Rev. Dr. Edward Schofield Travers will perform the ceremony, his last in St. Louis. He and Mrs. Travers will depart tomorrow for the East and in the fall will make their home in Rhinebeck, N. Y.

The bride will be preceded to the altar by Mr. Baldwin's sister, Miss Rocena Baldwin, as maid of honor, and by ten bridesmaids—Miss Marie Peckham Wilson, Miss Jane Tyler Messick, Miss Mary Merwin Shepley, Miss Louise Simmons, Miss Katharine McCluney, Mrs. Clinton L. Whittemore Jr., Mrs. John Kenning, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. James Johnson, Mrs. Edwin M. Ashcroft III, Evanston, Ill., and Miss Elaine Flach, Cincinnati.

Edward M. Durham III will be best man, and the ushers will include his brother, L. Warrington Baldwin Jr., three cousins, A. Dodge Crickett, Henry Dupont Baldwin, Boston; C. C. Baldwin Jr., New York; James Bartlett, Baltimore; John R. Chandler, Cleveland; Daniel C. Rehman, Cincinnati; and John K. Wallace, Thomas W. Pettus, Hobart, Okla. John McMillan, George Herbert Walker Jr., Stephen R. Sheldon and Roswell C. Dunn, St. Louis.

The bride's attendants will be gowned in white mouseline de soie, embroidered in tiny flowers with sashes of a contrasting shade and fashioned alike. The gowns are designed with V-necked bodices cut low at the back and long flowing skirts, fitted at the hips with godets. Short sleeved bolero jackets of the same material will complete the ensembles. Miss Baldwin will have a crushed girle of rose colored velvet tied at the side back with streamers to the floor, and will carry pink daisies and blue alphonso. The bridesmaids' gowns will have velvet sashes of sage blue velvet, and their flowers will be rapture roses, pink larkspur and pink daisies, arranged in arm bouquets. The young women will wear wide afternoon hats of white dovebrail, trimmed with velvet to match their girdles banding the brims and cut through to a bow in front, forming a bandeau.

The bride will wear ivory satin, designed on princess lines with long close fitting sleeves finished with a wide band of rose point lace ending at the elbows. A deep yoke of the lace adorns the front of the bodice and continues over the shoulders at each side where panels are set into the court train, which depends from the shoulders. The skirt, long and flaring, is finished with a short train. The ivory tulle bridal veil will be arranged from a tulle cap bordered with a coronet of rose point and a spray of orange blossoms at the back. She will carry white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Steedman is to be gowned in pink lace with a coat to match and a brown millan hat trimmed with pink. Mrs. Baldwin's gown is a bluish gray crepe with a coat of the material trimmed with fur at the sleeves, and a hat of the same tone.

Following the ceremony, a reception will be held at the Steedman home. A huge canvas marquee has been built adjoining the house to augment the facilities for receiving the guests, and has been decorated with spring blossoms, with the natural garden shrubbery forming the background.

The table for the bridal dinner has been laid in the dining room of the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Fox Steedman, uncle and aunt of the bride, 34 Westmoreland place, and will seat 42 guests. The table is U-shaped and almost covered with lilies of the valley, larkspur and lilies. A four-tiered wedding cake in the center of the U is decorated with candy holders containing many clusters of lilies of the valley.

Mr. Baldwin and his bride will spend the honeymoon in Madison and will attend the commencement exercises at the University of Wisconsin, where they were graduated in the same class. The bride is a member of Alpha Delta Phi and Bingham of Alpha Kappa Psi and Acadia. They will make their home in New York.

The out-of-town guests include Mrs. George W. Amstrong, Longton, Kan.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Bingham, parents of the bridegroom, and Miss Jane Bingham, Tomahawk; Dr. and Mrs. Edward H. Skinner and Mrs. Florence Skinner, Kansas City.

GOING TO EUROPE

NEW YORK. Early up and almost out of myself with rapture at Edna Ferber's description of a call upon the thane of Jed Harris, who among his pillows she said, suggested a fly in a pan of milk. And a note from Percy Hammond that he, also rode to his Newport (Ky.) wedding in a rubber tired hack.

Breakfasting on hot corn bread and a mackerel. And weeding out my desk came upon notes from the late Arnold Bennett and Charles G. Norris. Also a post card from the lecturer W. A. Porter in far away South Africa and put them aside for my scrap book.

Laboring until 5 and to a farewell tea to Vicki Baum, the Viennese author of "Grand Hotel." Then walking with my wife and to Dinty Moore's and fell to talking to Lou Holtz, Jack Yellen and Dinty Moore's son. Home early and how merrie and God blessed an evening en famille.

VICKI Baum's name is oddly descriptive. One imagines her somehow as radiant—a happy fusion of brilliance and activity. The sort who might express a sudden emotion with a Pavlova kick. In private life she is Frau Richard Lert, blonde and impulsively good humored. She does not manage the English language but she breaks it up a bit. In speaking of the ship on which she arrived several weeks ago being 50 hours late she explained: "We stuck in the mud."

THOSE who know—and I'm not one of them—say the most important bid for Rudy Vallee's radio popularity is the chubby caltrotator tenor Morton Downey. Downey for years crooned around night clubs and was only a mild favorite. But with the song "Wabash Moon," he caught what press agents term "the vast unseen audience." He now receives $5000 a week for personal appearances at movie houses. The chief reason, they say, he has not surpassed the Vallee fame is that he is happily married. Thus he loses the flapper love interest.

TRYING TO TRACE SLAYER BY BULLET FOUND IN FLOOR

Police Think It May Have Been One Which Killed J. P. Davis in Recent Holdup.

A bullet, taken from the floor of the Avenue Furniture Co. store at 1107-09 Franklin avenue, near the place where Jacob P. Davis, part owner of the store, was fatally shot by a Negro robber last Monday, is held by the police as possible evidence. The slayer is being sought, and no suspect is now under arrest.

The bullet, which appears to be of .45 caliber, was found imbedded in the flooring. The bullet, which caused Davis' death entered his jaw and went out at the right temple. If he was prostrate on the floor at the time, the bullet found in the floor may have been the one which killed him or it may have been another bullet fired from the slayer's revolver.

The shooting of Davis by the robber occurred while Police Capt. Tierney and two special officers were pursuing another Negro robber, James Stanford, who was killed by police bullets after Tierney had walked into the store and found the robbery in progress.

U. S. TO FILE LIENS ON CAPONE'S PROPERTY

Location of Holdings in California and Wisconsin Sought By Government.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, June 8.—The Government is seeking the location of "Scarface Al" Capone's property holdings as a preliminary move to the filing of civil liens to insure collection of the $215,083 the Government alleges Capone owes as income tax. Capone was indicted last Friday for alleged evasion of the income tax. He subsequently surrendered and was released on a $50,000 bond.

In addition to his Chicago and Miami Beach, Fla. real estate holdings, he is reported to own a huge ranch between Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal., and property near Eagle River, Wis.

Robert E. Neely, acting collector of internal revenue, said the lien actions would be started next week in the various revenue districts where Capone property could be found. He added that the action would cover safe deposit boxes and other personal property.

"The civil action," said Neely, "is compulsory and entirely separate from any criminal proceedings, which may be taken by the office of the United States District Attorney."

"No matter whether Capone pleads guilty to the criminal charges in the indictments returned Friday, and no matter what arrangement is made with the prosecutors, the civil action is entirely divorced from it."

An early trial on the income tax violation charge was promised by the prosecutors on the indictment, which alleged Capone's income between 1924 and 1929 was at least $1,032,654. They said the case would be disposed of by the end of the summer.

Deputies Restrained From Removing Capone's Furniture.

By the Associated Press. MIAMI, Fla., June 8.—A temporary restraining order prohibiting Deputy Sheriffs from further removal of household furnishings from Al Capone's Palm Island residence here, was issued today by Circuit Judge W. L. Freeland. The order was obtained by Frank Clark Jr., Miami attorney, who said he represented Mrs. Capone.

Deputy Sheriffs placed the house under attachment and removed a portion of its furnishings Saturday night following the filing of a suit against Capone by Vincent C. Giblin, Miami attorney. The officers had said they would remove more furniture today. Giblin seeks $50,000 as a balance due him as attorney fees.

KILLS SELF, SECOND ATTEMPT.

John Butler, 36 years old, a post-office clerk, died at City Hospital yesterday from poison which he took in a second attempt to end his life in the last three months. Butler was reported missing last Thursday by his wife, Helen, with whom he lived at Fairgrounds Hotel. Saturday afternoon he was found unconscious near Wells and Grand drives, in Forest Park. He had been under treatment for a nervous condition.

Stand of New York Indorsed by Committee Report Publication as to Holding and Their

Special to the Post-Dispatch. CHICAGO, June 8.—A definite stand on management practices of investment trusts, especially in relation to full information for and safeguarding of investors, is taken by the Investment Bankers' Association of America in its invitation to member companies to publish reports in the June number of the association's publication, Investment Banking. The report adopted at an annual meeting of the association Board of Governors, last month, refers to the position on investment trusts recently taken by the New York Stock Exchange, as "an effort to establish the highest standards of practice," and recommends that "these complete and carefully-thought-out regulations should be studied," and that they be followed by all members of this association, whether or not they are members of the New York Stock Exchange.

The report focuses its recommendations on the management type of investment trusts and fixed trusts. For the management type it specifies, among other things, that the reports of management investment trusts should give complete information as to the financial position of the trust as well as a clear statement of operations.

"In particular," the committee asserts, "the annual report should contain a complete statement of the investments held in the portfolio of the trust. Stockholders and prospective stockholders have a right to know in exactly what securities the management of the investment trust has invested its funds. In order that this may be accomplished the list of securities should give the names and amounts of each security."

"Securities should be carried on the balance sheet at cost, and it is recommended that costs be computed on an average basis. It is desirable that the total market value of securities be given in the report in order that stockholders may be able to determine the actual liquidating value of the shares, or preferably this liquidating value should be stated in the report, and its method of computation clearly shown in a tabular supplementing the income statement. The amount of the unrealized losses or depreciation, if any, of the portfolio should be clearly stated. If reserves are set against unrealized losses or other reasons, the nature and purpose of these reserves should be indicated with a statement as to whether they were created out of income or out of surplus, either earned or paid in."

Reporting of Profits. Pursuing its purpose, to bring about "a clearer understanding of this subject by the investing public," the report makes specific recommendations on the reporting of profits, as follows:

"In the income account, it is recommended that profits realized on the sale of securities be shown separately from other ordinary income items. In the event, however, that the management of an investment trust includes realized profits and losses in the income account, it is recommended that either of these is included, both should be included."

The report makes extended recommendations as to a trust requiring its own securities and as to dividend policies, and adds that these recommendations are based on two fundamental principles, namely:

"First, that the managers of investment trust are trustees in the highest sense and that in investment funds derived from sale of stocks the public, their policies should be able to withstand the test applied

Stand of New York Exchange Indorsed by Investment Bankers

Committee Report Proposes Fuller Informa- tion as to Holdings in Investment Trusts and Their Loading Charges.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 8.—A definite stand on management practices of investment trusts, especially in relation to full information for aid safeguarding of investors, is taken by the Investment Bankers' Association of America in its investment Companies Committee report in the June number of the association's publication, Investment Banking. The report adopted at annual meeting of the association's Board of Governors, last month, refers to the position on investment trusts recently taken by the New York Stock Exchange, as "an effort to establish the highest standards of practice," and it recommends that "these complete and carefully-thought-out regulations should be studied," and "that they be followed by all members of this association, whether or not they are members of the New York Stock Exchange."

The report focuses its recommendations on the management type of investment trusts and on fixed trusts. For the management type it specifies, among other things, that the reports of management investment trusts should give complete information as to the financial position of the trusts as well as a clear statement of operations.

"In particular," the committee asserts, "the annual report should contain a complete statement of the investments held in the portfolio of the trust. Stockholders and prospective stockholders have a right to know in exactly what securities the management of the investment trust has invested its funds. In order that this may be accomplished the list of securities should give the names and amounts of each security."

"Securities should be carried on the balance sheet at cost, and it is recommended that costs be computed on an average basis. It is desirable that the total market value of securities be given in the report in order that stockholders may be able to determine the actual liquidating value of their shares, or preferably this liquidating value should be stated in the report, and its method of computation clearly shown in a table supplementing the income statement. The amount of the unrealized losses or depreciation, if any, of the portfolio should be clearly stated. If reserves are set up against unrealized losses or for other reasons, the nature and purpose of these reserves should be indicated with a statement as to whether they were created out of income or out of surplus, either earned or paid in."

Reporting of Profits.

Pursuing its purpose, to bring about "a clearer understanding of the subject by the investing public," the report makes specific recommendations on the reporting of profits, as follows:

"In the income account, it is recommended that profits realized on the sale of securities be shown separately from other ordinary income items. In the event, however, that the management of an investment trust includes realized profits and losses in the income account, it is recommended that if either of these is included, both should be included."

The report makes extended recommendations as to a trust requiring its own securities and as to its dividend policies and adds that these recommendations are based on two fundamental principles, namely:

"First, that the managers of an investment trust are trustees in the highest sense and that in investing funds derived from sale of stock to the public, their policies should be able to withstand the test applicable to trusteeships. Second, that the management of an investment trust must be willing to take the public into its confidence through the publication of complete information including the policies and practices of the management."

Advertising Methods Criticized.

Referring to fixed trusts, the report makes pointed comment on descriptive circulars and advertisements of fixed trusts.

"A large part of the criticism directed at certain fixed trusts has been due to the descriptive circulars offering fixed trust shares," the committee says. "The inherent structure of the fixed trust is so complicated that the average investor is unable to determine the amount of the loading charges; and the circulars have frequently failed to make this information clear. Complete information should be given regarding the responsibility of the trustee as to the underlying shares and in the issue of the fixed trust shares themselves. Where the trustee has a limited responsibility specific statements to that effect should be made in order that the investor may realize exactly to what extent he can depend upon this trusteeship."

"The committee does not approve of certain advertising practices now in vogue. In a few instances, advertising material has indicated the profits that would have accrued to a holder of the fixed trust shares had they been purchased at a time prior to the organization of the trust. In some cases, it is difficult to believe that the sponsors who have selected the underlying property of the fixed trust would have had sufficient foresight to select these investments at the time of the hypothetical formation of the trust. In certain cases, the trust indenture contains requirements for the elimination of the underlying securities which would have made it necessary for the trustee to dispose of some of the shares that are assumed to have been held in the trust during the entire period covered by the advertisement. This being the case it is a clear deception to assume that the underlying property would have remained in the portfolio of the fixed trust during the whole period covered in the analysis."

The report points out that where fixed trusts make distributions as a result of stock-dividends and split-ups, shareholders should be advised that they are receiving a return of capital rather than current income. The report also sees danger in legislation of any sort at this time because, the committee says, it would be based on insufficient experience and because laws aimed at undesirable features would probably preclude incorporation of good features in future trusts."

The Investment Companies Committee, which made the report included Robert O. Lord, Guardian Detroit Co., Inc., Detroit, chairman; Robert E. Christie Jr., Dillon, Read & Co., New York; Dillon, Read & Co., New York; and Harry F. Stix, Stix & Co., St. Louis.

NEGRO CHAUFFEUR ACCUSED IN FATAL AUTO COLLISION

Sidney Walker, Who Had Police-

Criminal Carelessness.

A verdict of criminal carelessness, holding Sidney Walker, Negro chauffeur of 3739 Cook avenue, was returned today at an inquest in the death Friday of Andrew Rodger, 60-year-old watchman of 5425 Magnolia avenue, who suffered a skull injury May 31 in an automobile collision at Page boulevard and Kingshighway.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Lennon said he would ask police to make an investigation. Danzer, who suffered fractures of the collar bone and shoulder blade, appeared at the inquest and was released.

stand between you and trouble!

Good? Of course they're good. If they weren't—well, ship them all off to Greenland and see what would happen back home. Yes, these big boys are long on courage—and resourcefulness, too. Give them a "hand," everybody! They're always ready to lend you one.

It's what's "under the jacket" that counts—

Shiny silver buttons don't make a good officer. Or glittering promises a good cigarette.

Under CHESTERFIELD'S white jacket of pure French cigarette paper is a milder, better-tasting smoke—and it's what's "under the jacket" that counts.

CHESTERFIELDS are milder—smoke as many as you like. CHESTERFIELDS taste better—you know that the minute you light up!

More men and women are changing every day from other cigarettes to CHESTERFIELDS.

STRAWBERRIES MAKE TEMPTING PRESERVES

Now Possible to Make Jelly, Jam and Marmalade in Fifteen Minutes Time.

The peak of the strawberry season is here and now is the opportune time to put up this fruit for winter use.

The increasing use of jams, jellies and preserves for accompaniments for baked meats and fowl, in desserts and cakes and combination dishes of various types, has brought back the preserve shelf and the jam closet.

Why not make any or all the tempting jellies, jams and marmalades which can be derived from delicious berries? Why not have strawberry jelly and jam for turnovers, tarts, ice creams?

In the old days—that is to say when grandmother was a girl—strawberry jelly was considered hard to make. But now the home cook can be certain of excellent strawberry jelly and jam.

The secret lies in the short-bolt method, which includes the use of pectin.

Try these unusual recipes:

Strawberry Jelly.
Take four cups prepared fruit juice, seven and one-half cups sugar and one bottle pectin.

Crush thoroughly or grind about three quarts fully ripe berries. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard one-half minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 8-ounce glasses.

Spiced Strawberry Jam.
Four cups prepared berries, six and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup vinegar, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves and allspice, one-half cup pectin.

Cut small or medium fully ripe berries in halves lengthwise, large berries in quarters.

Measure sugar, prepared fruit, vinegar and spices into large kettle, mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard three minutes. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 8-ounce glasses.

Crushed Strawberry Jam.
Take four cups prepared fruit, seven cups sugar, one-half cup pectin.

Grind about two quarts fully ripe berries, or crush completely, one layer at a time, so that each berry is reduced to a pulp.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 8-ounce glasses.

TIME BRINGS CHANGES
In Earlier Days the Home Cook Ground the Coffee.

Up until a few years ago most of the coffee we used was bought in the bulk and ground at home, but today it is extensively sold in packages under brand names, and may be obtained in the bean or in various degrees of grind for different uses.

This packaged coffee makes possible a uniformity of blend and quality which was not always so assured in the old days.

Air tight containers preserve the flavor and freshness of the coffee, and if the coffee is bought ground in the package, care must be taken to keep it air tight for when exposed to the air some of the valuable properties of the coffee are lost.

A Well Rounded Lunch.
Vegetable chowders and hearty crackers or bread and butter make a substantial beginning for lunch. Fruit salad, cake left from the night before and milk or hot cocoa round out the meal.

Don't buy Malt Syrup for Price—buy for Quality

The few cents more you pay for Mound City Malt Syrup insures your getting rich flavor and highest quality. It costs a little more, but is worth a great deal more. Why take chances when you can be sure of satisfaction. Save the labels. Write for premium catalogue.

BIRD'S NEST PUDDING

A Simple Sweet Which Boys and Girls Always Relish.

Make a biscuit dough according to any preferred recipe. Roll out on a floured board and shape the size of a small baking pan or dish.

In the baking dish dispose five quick cooking apples pared and cored and the cavities filled with sugar, a bit of butter and a teaspoon water. Sprinkle with cinnamon and place the crust over all. Cut slits in the crust to allow the steam of escape.

Bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned and the apples tender. Turn out on a plate with the crust on the bottom and the apples on top. Cut into squares with an apple in the center of each square and serve with rich milk or hard sauce.

PROCESS OF MAKING ROLLS HAS BEEN SIMPLIFIED

Even Amateur Cooks Need Have No Hesitancy About Baking These Delicacies.

Scald one cup milk and cool until lukewarm, then add one yeast cake broken in small pieces and stir until dissolved.

Next stir in two cups flour, beat until smooth, cover and let stand in a warm place for an hour, or until well risen.

Mix one-half cup shortening with one-quarter cup sugar until well blended, add one egg and beat until smooth, then add one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon grated lemon rind, one teaspoon salt and stir into the yeast mixture with one cup flour or enough to make a dough that can be kneaded. Be careful to keep the dough as soft as it can be handled. Knead for a few minutes, then roll out in a rectangular sheet a scant quarter inch thick. Sprinkle with one-quarter cup soft brown sugar, one cup seedless raisins and two tablespoons shredded citron. Fold over in three layers and place on a greased baking pan. Let rise until doubled in bulk and bake in a moderate oven—375 degrees—for 45 to 50 minutes. Reheat for serving or serve cold, as desired.

Suffled Potatoes.
Wash the potatoes thoroughly. Peel and slice. Lay the slices on a dry cloth, patting them gently with another dry cloth. Place a few at a time, in a deep frying basket and plunge this immediately into moderately hot fat. Shake the basket to and fro all the time, and remove the potatoes when tender. Allow them to cool slightly, and drain. Then plunge them twice into another kettle of very hot fat—in and out, quickly each time. The potatoes will puff out, becoming light, hollow, and golden brown. Lay them on a cloth to drain thoroughly. Sprinkle with salt, and serve immediately.

Harry Lauder Wrote a Song about It

Remember when the Scotch comedian sang of the joys of "Breakfast in Bed on Sunday Morning?"

A lot of St. Louisans agree with Sir Harry's idea of Sunday morning comfort. And they add to their enjoyment by having the Sunday Post-Dispatch delivered by carrier for reading during breakfast. It's more convenient to go to the door and pick up your paper than to make a trip to the newsstand, or wait for the boy from the corner store to deliver a copy.

You may arrange by telephone for carrier delivery of the Sunday Post-Dispatch at the regular price of 10 cents a copy. (Wouldn't Harry Lauder like that feature of this convenient service?)

TWO WAYS ARE SUGGESTED FOR CANNING PINEAPPLE

Many Home Cooks Enjoy Putting Up This Delicious Tropical Product.

Although canned pineapple put up by the commercial canners is so satisfactory, yet there are many housewives who delight in canning this delicious fruit. The market is featuring pineapple this year and now is the time to can it.

There are two general methods of canning pineapples, the cold pack and the open kettle.

Choose firm, ripe fruit, pare it and remove all eyes. Slice and cut into cubes, removing hard core. For cold pack, pack the diced pineapple, cold, into clean hot jars, pour a thin syrup (made with one part sugar and one part water and cooking until the sugar is dissolved) over the fruit, clear to the top. Partly seal the jars and process in a hot water bath 30 minutes after the water begins boiling. Remove from the canner and seal at once.

Open Kettle Method.
Make a thin syrup of sugar and water. Boil prepared fruit gently in syrup for 25 minutes. Pack in hot clean jars and seal at once.

Ham With Potatoes.
One thick slice ham uncooked, four cups sliced raw potatoes, one and one-half cups thin white sauce, salt and pepper. Place ham in bottom of casserole, cover with sliced raw potatoes and season with a dash of pepper and a little salt. Pour over the whole the white sauce and bake uncovered for three-fourths hour in a moderate or 350-degree oven. Then place ham slice on top of the potatoes and continue baking 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender and ham is well browned but not dry.

SOME SWEET SNACKS FOR AFTERNOON TEA

Dainty Pastries and Attractive Small Cakes Served at the Informal Tea.

Afternoon tea, being the mode for informal entertaining there is great rivalry among hostesses for intriguing tidbits to pass guests with the refreshing beverages. For instance these fruited tea biscuits which may be made in the home kitchen.

Fruited Tea Biscuits.
Ingredients necessary are two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons butter, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one egg yolk, one tablespoon candied cherries, one tablespoon citron, four tablespoons seeded raisins and three-fourths cup milk or water. Sift together dry ingredients; cut in butter; add finely cut fruits and raisins. Add egg yolk which has been thoroughly mixed with milk or water. Mix into a soft dough, toss on slightly floured board, pat and cut with biscuit cutter. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes.

Sweets incorporating jams and marmalades are being featured at informal afternoon teas. This recipe for cheese cookies will illustrate this use of jam.

Cream Cheese Teas.
One-half cup butter, one cup cream cheese, one cup flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon baking powder and one-half cup almonds.

Cream butter thoroughly; add cheese and cream again. Sift flour before measuring; add salt and baking powder and stir into first mixture. Place in ice box over night.

Roll to one-eighth inch thickness; cut half of dough with cookie cutter and other half with doughnut cutter of same size. Wet outer edge of first cookie, place other half on top, brush with water and scatter finely ground blanched almonds over outer edge. Bake 10 to 15 minutes in hot oven. Fill center with strawberry jam.

Scotch Shortbread.
Scotch shortbread is a dainty accompaniment to the afternoon cup of tea. Try this recipe for making it.

Ingredients needed are one pound butter, one-half pound powdered sugar, one teaspoon lemon or vanilla extract and four cups flour. Cream butter thoroughly; add sifted sugar gradually with flavoring, creaming well. Work in sifted flour gradually; chill. Roll on slightly floured board to one-half inch thickness. Cut in squares; prick with fork and bake 25 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

TEMPTING FRUIT CUSTARD
Acceptable Sweet for An Informal Company Luncheon.

Pare and cut in thin slices six oranges and pour over them a cupful of sugar. Bring one pint of milk to a boil and while hot add three eggs and one tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold milk. Stir constantly while this thickens and as soon as it is thick pour over the slices of oranges.

Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth and add two tablespoonfuls of confectioners' sugar. Beat again, pour over the custard. Brown lightly in a quick oven and let cool.

Place in refrigerator and allow to chill thoroughly before serving.

Rice and Cheese.
Put one cup boiled rice, one tablespoon butter, one cup milk and a little pepper and salt in a double boiler. When the milk is hot add one cup grated cheese. When the cheese has melted add two well-beaten egg yolks and cook until the egg begins to thicken. Then remove from the fire and add the beaten whites of the two eggs. Put in a baking dish or ramekins and brown in the oven.

An Unusual Salad.
Sliced alligator pears and sliced tomatoes arranged on lettuce and sprinkled with minced chives make a delicious salad when served with French dressing. One medium-sized pear and two tomatoes will make four servings. Cut the pear in half, peel and remove the pit. Cut in slices about one-eighth inch thick. Serve very cold.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS PUT OFF AIR, DECLARES EXPONENT

Entirely the Fault of the Stations, Rejoins Federal Radio Commissioner.

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—Contrasting views on the status of educational broadcasting were given by two speakers at the opening session of the second Institute for Education by Radio at Ohio State University today.

Dr. Joy E. Morgan, chairman of the National Committee on education by radio, declared educational stations have been "squeezed" off the air and said the committee is trying to "save or recover for the uses of education a fair share of the broadcasting frequencies."

Harold A. Lafont of the Federal Radio Commission, told the delegates the commission is friendly to educational broadcasting but cited statistics to show that educational stations are using only a third of the time assigned to them. And of the time used only a little more than a fourth is actually devoted to education.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS PUT OFF AIR, DECLARES EXPONENT

Entirely the Fault of the Stations, Rejoins Federal Radio Commissioner.

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—Contrasting views on the status of educational broadcasting were given by two speakers at the opening session of the second Institute for Education by Radio at Ohio State University today.

Dr. Joy E. Morgan, chairman of the National Committee on education by radio, declared educational stations have been "squeezed" off the air and said the committee is trying to "save or recover for the uses of education a fair share of the broadcasting frequencies."

Harold A. Lafount of the Federal Radio Commission, told the delegates the commission is friendly to educational broadcasting but cited statistics to show that educational stations are using only a third of the time assigned to them, and of the time used only a little more than a fourth is actually devoted to education.

SUIT TO TEST POWERS OF LEGISLATIVE BODY

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 8.—Representative Elmer O. Jones of Macon County said yesterday a test suit to determine whether a special investigating committee created by either House of the Legislature had power to carry on its work after adjournment of the Legislature would be instituted in the Supreme Court after final adjournment of the 1931 Legislature.

Jones is chairman of a committee created by the House to investigate the management of State departments, boards and commissions.

The decision to file a test suit follows a ruling by the Attorney-General's Department that the Jones Committee would have no legal power to carry on an inquiry, or expend state funds for that purpose, after the adjournment of the Legislature. The adjournment will follow completion of the impeachment trial of State Treasurer Larry Brunk.

The Attorney-General held it was well settled by the courts that a committee created by one branch of a legislative body had no powers after the dissolution of the body appointing it.

In the same opinion the Attorney-General held that the committee was not entitled to receive in a lump sum the appropriation of $7500 from the contingent fund of the House, for its expenses. He ruled the committee was entitled to payment of proper expenses incurred in any official work it might do while the Legislature was in session but had no power to use such an appropriation after final adjournment.

The appropriation of $7500 from the House contingent fund was made in a resolution offered by Jones last May 2, the last day of regular legislative work by the House. A resolution to expunge the House record showing passage of this resolution was introduced in the House last week by Representative Joffe of Kansas City, when the House reconvened after a recess of a month. Some doubt was expressed that the appropriation had been voted by the House. After considerable discussion Joffe withdrew his resolution.

The resolution creating the committee, which was introduced by Jones, authorizes a general inquiry into the management and efficiency of the state departments, boards, bureaus and commissions, and provides that the report of the committee shall be submitted to the next Legislature. No charges are made and the resolution does not direct investigation of any particular departments. So far the committee has not begun any specific investigation, pending a ruling regarding its powers to continue the investigation.

Members of the committee are Representatives Jones, chairman; Gray Snyder of Lewis County, Earl Tethrow of Buchanan County, Lawrence H. Presley of Dallas County, and Russ H. Limbaugh of Cape Girardeau County. Presley and Limbaugh are Republicans, the others are Democrats.

SAYS CHICAGO TAX PROBLEM IS IGNORED BY EMMERSON

Mayor Cermak Threatens to Go Direct to Legislature for Aid.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Mayor Anton J. Cermak, fighting for legislation on Chicago's taxation problems, said Gov. Emmerson had not answered his request for a conference here and "it shows he is not interested."

Cermak said he hoped to hear from the Governor and that the conference might be held here.

"If the Governor doesn't come here we will go there," he said. "If bills are argued upon by the Legislature they can be passed in less than a week, and in any event the date of adjournment can be postponed until June 30."

Cermak said he favored a meeting of bankers and his own advisers here regardless of the Governor's action.

Of course I've switched to CAMELS

You don't have to look beyond your own intimate circle to realize what has happened.

Everywhere you see evidence of a great country-wide switch to Camels.

That is because the new Humidor Pack performs a real new service for the smoker.

Throughout the nation, literally millions of people have found by actual test that the new air-sealed, sanitary package of moisture-proof Cellophane not only keeps out dust and germs, but also keeps in the rich, mild flavor of the choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos of which Camels are blended.

To show their real appreciation of the Humidor Pack Camel smokers from all parts of the country write letters telling the advantages of this scientific new wrapping.

Women tell us they carry Camels in the Humidor Pack in their handbags without having them absorb powder and perfume odors. Workingmen say this moisture-proof wrapping protects their cigarettes from perspiration and pocket dust. Sailors are enthusiastic because the damp salt air does not reach Humidor-packed Camels.

All real benefits of course, but the chief fact that is causing this great nation-wide swing to Camels is the protection which this air-sealed wrapping gives to the choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos of which Camel cigarettes are blended.

No peppery dust to irritate the membrane; no dried-out tobacco to burn the tongue or sear the throat. Just the fresh, cool mildness of perfectly conditioned tobacco.

Switch to Camels for one day, then quit them—if you can.

Tune in CAMEL QUARTER HOUR featuring Morton Downey and Tony Wons
Columbia Broadcasting System—every night except Sunday

CAMELS

NO CIGARETTE AFTER-TASTE

Don't remove the moisture-proof Cellophane from your package of Camels after you open it. The Humidor Pack is protection against perfume and powder odors, dust and germs. It delivers fresh Camels and keeps them right until you smoke the last one.

TWO WAYS ARE SUGGESTED

FOR CANNING PINEAPPLE

Many Home Cooks Enjoy Putting Up This Delicious Tropical Product.

Although canned pineapple put up by the commercial canners is so satisfactory, yet there are many housewives who delight in canning this delicious fruit. The market is featuring pineapple this year and now is the time to can it. There are two general methods of canning pineapples, the cold pack and the open kettle.

Choose firm, ripe fruit, pare it

into cubes, removing hard core.

For cold pack, pack the sliced pineapple, cold, into clean hot jars, pour a thin syrup (made with one part sugar and one part water and cooking until the sugar is dissolved) over the fruit, clear to the top. Partly seal the jars and process in a hot water bath 30 minutes after the water begins boiling. Remove from the canner and seal at once.

Open Kettle Method.

Make a thin syrup of sugar and water. Boil prepared fruit gently in syrup for 15 minutes. Pack in to hot clean jars and seal at once.

Ham With Potatoes.

One thick slice ham uncooked.

Four cups sliced raw potatoes, one and one-half cups thin white sauce, salt and pepper. Place ham in bottom of casserole, cover with sliced raw potatoes and season with a dash of pepper and a little salt. Pour over the whole the white sauce and bake uncovered for three-fourths hour in a moderate or 350-degree oven. Then place ham slice on top of the potatoes and continue baking 15 minutes or until potatoes are tender and ham is well browned but not dry.

SOME SWEET SNACKS FOR AFTERNOON TEA

Dainty Pastries and Attractive Small Cakes Served at the Informal Tea.

Afternoon tea, being the mode for informal entertaining here is great rivalry among hostesses for intriguing tidbits to pass guests with the refreshing beverages. For instance these fruited tea biscuits which may be made in the home kitchen.

Fruited Tea Biscuits.

Ingredients necessary are two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons butter, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one egg yolk, one tablespoon candied cherries, one tablespoon citron, four tablespoons seeded raisins and three fourths cup milk or water. Sift together dry ingredients, cut in butter, add finely cut fruits and raisins. Add egg yolk which has been thoroughly mixed with milk or water. Mix into a soft dough, roll on slightly floured board, pat and cut with biscuit cutter. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes.

Sweets incorporating jams and marmalades are being featured at informal afternoon teas. This recipe for cheese cookies will illustrate this use of jam.

Cream Cheese Teas.

One-half cup butter, one cup cream cheese, one cup flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon baking powder and one-half cup almonds.

Cream butter thoroughly; add cheese and cream again. Sift flour before measuring; add salt and baking powder and stir into firm mixture. Place in ice box overnight.

Roll to one-eighth inch thickness; cut half of dough with cookie cutter and other half with doughnut cutter of same size. Wet outer edge of first cookie, place other half on top, brush with water and scatter finely ground blanched almonds over outer edge. Bake 10 to 15 minutes in hot oven. Fill center with strawberry jam.

Scottish Shortbread.

Scottish shortbread is a dainty accompaniment to the afternoon cup of tea. Try this recipe for making it.

Ingredients needed are one pound butter, one-half pound powdered sugar, one teaspoon lemon or vanilla extract and four cups flour. Cream butter thoroughly; add sifted sugar gradually with flavoring, creaming well. Work in sifted flour gradually; chill. Roll on slightly floured board to one-half inch thickness. Cut in squares; prick with fork and bake 25 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

TEMPTING FRUIT CUSTARD

Acceptable Sweet for An Informal Company Luncheon.

Pare and cut in thin slices six oranges and pour over them a cupful of sugar. Bring one pint of milk to a boil and while hot add three egg yolks and one tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold milk. Stir constantly while this thickens and as soon as it is thick pour over the slices of oranges.

Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth and add two tablespoonfuls of confectioners' sugar. Beat again, pour over the custard. Brown lightly in a quick oven and let cool.

Place in refrigerator and allow to chill thoroughly before serving.

Rice and Cheese.

Put one cup boiled rice, one tablespoon butter, one cup milk and a little pepper and salt in a double boiler. When the milk is hot add one cup grated cheese. When the cheese has melted add two well-beaten egg yolks and cook until the egg begins to thicken. Then remove from the fire and add the beaten whites of the two eggs. Put in a baking dish or ramekins and brown in the oven.

An Unusual Salad.

Sliced alligator pears and sliced tomatoes arranged on lettuce and sprinkled with minced chives make a delicious salad when served with French dressing. One medium-sized pear and two tomatoes will make four servings. Cut the pear in half, peel and remove the pit. Cut in slices about one-eighth inch thick. Serve very cold.

A COFFEE TREAT

For Slim Figures

For it meets fashion's diet needs through the roasting process called *Vi-raying. By this process the neutralization of nature's bitter oils is aided. Thus the coffee is sweet enough in itself for many and the addition of much less than the usual sweetening well stirred makes it sweet enough for anyone. Style-wise women drink H & K, the coffee for slender styles.

MEN Like THE FRESHNESS

You have seen manufacturer after manufacturer recognize the fact that vacuum packing is the sure way of keeping coffee delicious, EVER FRESH. H & K, always ahead, pioneered in vacuum packing over a decade ago. H & K makes seven to ten cups more per pound.

Vi-raying is the exclusive name for our roasting process (developed through fifty years of experience, research and improvement in coffee roasting) which aids in the neutralization of the bitter oils found in all coffees. Everyone knows that it takes more sweetening to overcome a bitter substance than one which is not bitter. Thus, you can readily see why H & K Coffee takes the minimum amount of sweetening.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS PUT OFF AIR, DECLARES EXPONENT
Entirely the Fault of the Stations, Rejoins Federal Radio Commissioner.

By the Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—Congressional views on the status of educational broadcasting were given by two speakers at the opening session of the second Institute for Education by Radio at Ohio State University today.

Dr. Joy E. Morgan, chairman of the National Committee on education by radio, declared educational stations have been "squeezed" off the air and said the committee is trying to "save or recover for the use of education a fair share of the broadcasting frequencies."

Harold A. Lafont of the Federal Radio Commission, told the delegates the commission is friendly to educational broadcasting but cited statistics to show that educational stations are using only a third of the time assigned to them, and of the time used only a little more than a fourth is actually devoted to education.

SUITS TO TEST POWERS OF LEGISLATIVE BODY

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 8.—Representative Elmer O. Jones of Macon County said yesterday a test suit to determine whether a special investigating committee created by either House of the Legislature had power to carry on its work after adjournment of the Legislature would be instituted in the Supreme Court after final adjournment of the 1931 Legislature. Jones is chairman of a committee created by the House to investigate the management of State departments, boards and commissions.

The decision to file a test suit follows a ruling by the Attorney-General's Department that the Jones Committee would have no legal power to carry on an inquiry, or expend state funds for that purpose, after the adjournment of the Legislature. The adjournment will follow completion of the impeachment trial of State Treasurer Larry Brunk.

The Attorney-General held it was well settled by the courts that a committee created by one branch of a legislative body had no powers after the dissolution of the body appointing it.

In the same opinion the Attorney-General held that the committee was not entitled to receive in a lump sum the appropriation of $7500 from the contingent fund of the House, for its expenses. He ruled the committee was entitled to payment of proper expenses incurred in any official work it might do while the Legislature was in session but had no power to use such an appropriation after final adjournment.

The appropriation of $7500 from the House contingent fund was made in a resolution offered by Jones last May 2, the last day of regular legislative work by the House. A resolution to expunge the House record showing passage of this resolution was introduced in the House last week by Representative Joffe of Kansas City, when the House reconvened after a recess of a month. Some doubt was expressed that the appropriation had been voted by the House. After considerable discussion Joffe withdrew his resolution.

The resolution creating the committee, which was introduced by Jones, authorizes a general inquiry into the management and efficiency of the state departments, boards, bureaus and commissions, and provides that the report of the committee shall be submitted to the next Legislature. No charges are made and the resolution does not direct investigation of any particular departments. So far the committee has not begun any specific investigation, pending a ruling regarding its powers to continue the investigation.

Members of the committee are Representatives Jones, chairman; Gray Snyder of Lewis County, Earl Tethrow of Buchanan County, Lawrence H. Presley of Dallas County, and Russ H. Limbaugh of Cape Girardeau County. Presley and Limbaugh are Republicans, the others are Democrats.

SAYS CHICAGO TAX PROBLEM IS IGNORED BY EMMERSON

Mayor Cermak Threatens to Go Direct to Legislature for Aid.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 8.—Mayor Anton J. Cermak, fighting for legislation on Chicago's taxation problems, said Gov. Emmerson had not answered his request for a conference here and "it shows he is not interested."

Cermak said he hoped to hear from the Governor and that the conference might be held here.

"If the Governor doesn't come here we will go there," he said. "If bills are argued upon by the Legislature they can be passed in less than a week, and in any event the date of adjournment can be postponed until June 30."

Cermak said he favored a meeting of bankers and his own advisers here regardless of the Governor's action.

Smoke a fresh cigarette

Of course I've switched to CAMELS

You don't have to look beyond your own intimate circle to realize what has happened.

Everywhere you see evidence of a great country-wide switch to Camels.

That is because the new Humidor Pack performs a real new service for the smoker.

Throughout the nation, literally millions of people have found by actual test that the new air-sealed, sanitary package of moisture-proof Cellophane not only keeps out dust and germs, but also keeps in the rich, mild flavor of the choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos of which Camels are blended.

To show their real appreciation of the Humidor Pack Camel smokers from all parts of the country write letters telling the advantages of this scientific new wrapping.

Women tell us they carry Camels in the Humidor Pack in their handbags without having them absorb powder and perfume odors. Workingmen say this moisture-proof wrapping protects their cigarettes from perspiration and pocket dust. Sailors are enthusiastic because the damp salt air does not reach Humidor-packed Camels.

All real benefits of course, but the chief fact that is causing this great nation-wide swing to Camels is the protection which this air-sealed wrapping gives to the choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos of which Camel cigarettes are blended.

No peppery dust to irritate the membrane; no dried-out tobacco to burn the tongue or sear the throat. Just the fresh, cool mildness of perfectly conditioned tobacco.

Switch to Camels for one day, then quit them—if you can.

Tune in CAMEL QUARTER HOUR featuring Morton Downey and Tony Wons
Columbia Broadcasting System—every night except Sunday

ECONOMIST SAYS U. S. CAN AND MUST GET OUT OF DEPRESSION

fect confidence into the situation is for the Federal Government to float a tremendous bond issue for public works.

"There should be no hesitation in adding to the public debt for this purpose. Interest rates are low. The credit of the Federal Government is at its best.

"The Hoover administration is supposed to have had people canvassing the whole public works situation. It ought by this time to have a program charted to such an extent that the proceeds of a bond issue could be laid out immediately and to the best advantage. If it has not developed such a program it has been incredibly negligent.

"We should have a bond issue of from $3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000. Even in normal times, the Federal and State governments spend $1,500,000,000 a year on roads alone. Let us get ahead with this program. We need roads for the more than 25,000,000 automobiles in this country. Let us construct public buildings, bridges and the like. The expenditure of $3,000,000,000 on public works would be equivalent to starting an industry almost the present size of the automobile industry. It would lead to the employment of nearly 750,000 workmen.

Immediate Business Stimulus.
"If the expedient of a bond issue should work—and economists say that it would—there would be an immediate stimulating effect on all business. Government revenues would be increased. All the odds favor the success of the plan. Any argument that might have been brought against it a year ago has been dissipated by the liquidation that has since taken place.

"Much has been said about the recent expansion of public building activity. The fact is that all the efforts of Federal and local governments did not increase the total expenditures on public works in 1930 by more than one or two per cent over 1929.

"Business revival is being held back by the fears and uncertainties of private business. For nearly two years there has been a liquidation of business reaching into all known markets—domestic and foreign, labor and commodity, security and real estate. In the train of this liquidation have come an unusual number of bank and business failures and an appalling drop in prices. Further liquidation will bring added uncertainty, more failures and a continuation of the present state of affairs.

"Now, in these circumstances, when business is fearful and investors are timid, when the low interest rate has not produced the desired effect, is it not logical to turn to an agency that has sound credit and the responsibility to hasten recovery? The Federal Government has the borrowing power. It should have ready a public works program.

Discredited Forecasts.

The discussion touched on some of the discredited forecasts of the administration and its spokesmen.

"Mr. Hoover and his associates," said Dr. Wolman, "told us that the liquidation was over in March, 1930. But there has been a tremendous drop since then. There has been a great increase in bank failures since then. Anybody who thought that we had reached bottom in March, 1930, cannot pretend to have any formula by which he can tell how long it will take for business to get back to normal.

"Those who say that the Government has had no policy," he continued, "are talking nonsense. It has had a policy, but that policy has failed. I refer to the work of our central fiscal planning agency—the Federal Reserve Board. Since the stock market crash of 1929, the board has followed the policy of pumping cheap money into industry, by reducing every kind of interest rate over which it had any control. The theory was that if money rates were cheapened, the price of bonds would be forced up, and there would be plenty of cheap money for industrial reconstruction.

"This device is a two-edged sword. When it doesn't work, people lose confidence in the sort of securities you want them to buy, and the process of recovery is retarded. That is what has been happening to us. Whatever good was done by the lower money rates in 1930 was undone by the bank failures in the last quarter of the year.

"When a big bank fails, like the Bank of United States in New York, people become suspicious of all banks, and especially of the banks associated with the one that has failed. Runs begin. The banks affected have to get cash. They begin to throw their bonds on the market. Other banks get nervous. They say they must put themselves into a more liquid position, and so they, too, begin to dump bonds. When this happens, the price of bonds is depressed and their yield is increased. All this has come about, instead of what the Federal Reserve Board intended.

Same Thing in Europe.

"Europe has been going through much the same experience. Money rates were cheapened, but the political unsettlement destroyed the confidence of both local and foreign investors. Foreign bonds, in consequence, have gone to pot. The assistance given toward recovery by low money rates has been destroyed.

"Now that the policy of the Federal Reserve Board has been vitiated by all these circumstances, the time has surely come for us to take a more positive and constructive position—to say that we will share in world reconstruction as we did in the war. It appears that we are participating, through the bank of international settlements, in a loan to the Bank of Austria. This is the sort of thing we should have done earlier, and on a larger scale.

"We are sensitive to all that happens in Europe. We cannot maintain a condition of economic well-being by adhering to the policy of economic isolation. Whether we like it or not, we are more and more deeply affected by the political upheavals of South America, the revolutions of China, the capacity of Germany to borrow and to preserve peace. As the largest creditor nation in the world, our stakes in the trade of the world are driven too deeply to be disregarded because of temporary political pressure. We shall in the future serve our own interests most effectively, not by a negative attitude of suspicion and distrust, but by a positive policy of conciliation and economic co-operation.

Importance of Foreign Trade.
Dr. Wolman places a much higher estimate than Dean Donahue on the importance of the foreign trade to the national economic health. He regards the 10 per cent of our total production that goes into foreign markets as a factor that could only be reduced at the risk of retarding business recovery.

"Our relations with the rest of the world," he said, "will be closer and closer, and we have got to look at the economic future from that standpoint. We shall be more and more dependent on foreign trade. We have got to have an external market for the products of our machines."

He was asked whether he thought the high tariff bill of the Hoover administration had anything to do with the depression.

"The tariff increase," he replied, "was undoubtedly a contributing cause. There was no justification for it."

What of the various suggestions that wages be "adjusted" downward to accord with the fall in commodity prices?

The total industrial situation, he said, could not be improved by reductions in labor cost.

He had spoken of a bond issue for public works as the first item on a constructive program. What was his second item?

Unemployment Insurance.
"The second item," he said, "is compulsory unemployment insurance. Though 20 years ago this device was not yet in an experimental stage, it has today been adopted by the advanced industrial countries of Europe, where more than 40,000,000 persons are insured against unemployment. Unemployment insurance systems have been voluntarily adopted in this country by such great corporations as the General Electric Co. and the Eastman Kodak Co. and in nearly half the clothing industry.

"Every sound business has always set aside reserves for dividends against the depreciation of machinery and a variety of contingencies. The establishment of unemployment reserves merely carries this principle one step further and creates some protection against one of the most terrible risks of modern industry."

While working ourselves out of the present depression, Dr. Wolman continued, we should be planning for the future.

"It is certain," he said, "that unless some plan is found for bringing the business machine under control, we may confidently expect these upheavals to continue during the predictable future. To achieve foresight and control involves a view of the total state of business that can be had only through the medium of an agency created for the purpose.

"We need a central agency, composed of representatives of business and of government, to observe and interpret the major forces which play upon the business situation. From this function, it will be but a short step for the agency to assume the exercise of at least a minimum of control or suggestion over the chaotic forces of competitive business."

gulators more time to seek a permanent working agreement. Behind the dissolution of the clubs is the whole issue of the education of youth. This was supposed to have been settled by the Vatican-Italian concordat, but disagreement arose soon after that concordat was signed.

The document put the priest back in the classroom, but the Vatican, it appeared, wanted a more religious atmosphere in the schools while the Government contended that the stipulated period of religious instruction fulfilled the requirements of the concordat.

The same issue arose in the Sunday drills by various organizations of Fascist young men. The Government permitted participation by a chaplain, but this did not create the "religious atmosphere" which the church desires.

KILLING OF MAN IN BAR FIGHT HELD JUSTIFIABLE

Coroner's Inquest in Death of W. A. Johnson, Twice Accused of Murder.

A Coroner's verdict of justifiable homicide was returned today in the death of William A. Johnson, known to police as "One Eye," shot and killed in a pistol fight Saturday night in a bar at 3610 Hebert street, in which a bystander, Henry Finkenkeller, 25-year-old hatmaker, or, of 3558-A Ashland avenue, was wounded critically.

Glider P. Varn, former bartender at the place where the shooting occurred, admitted shooting Johnson, who had been accused of murder twice in the last 17 years. Varn declared he fired in self-defense.

His story was corroborated at the inquest by John E. Keeton, 4643 Carter street, who testified he was talking to Varn when Johnson entered and exclaimed:

"You have a difference to settle with me—let's get busy."

Johnson then jostled Varn, Keeton said, and both men drew pistols and began shooting. He was unable to say which shot Finkenkeller.

If you ask my Opinion Martha Carr

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. These who do not wish to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for a personal reply.

DEAR MRS. CARR: What is this I am suffering with? My choice of companions are those whose society generally bans. I dearly love them because they have proved so interesting, far more so than those whose lives are above reproach. And since, preferring them as I do and knowing something of their innermost lives through their confidence in me, I should keep their affairs to myself. I can't understand why, for instance, at the first opportunity I talk about them to people. I am anxious to please. Words pour from my mouth denouncing them. When I am alone again, I reproach myself, but this occurs again and again. Tell me how to plaster my tongue.

MISFIT.
I seem to me with a mind which analyzes the situation as yours does, you might diagnose and prescribe for your own case. Evidently your desire to roll a juicy morsel of gossip under your tongue is stronger than the loyalty in your system. You can be thankful that God gave you an analytical mind. That will not make up for a tepid conscience, but it will help you see yourself clearly in your own light as hypocritical. Sometimes the people you mention have a curious fascination, everybody knows that, but they are also so distasteful and their lack of moral principle so repugnant to the charm is overbalanced. Try and see what a little will-power will do. Had you ever thought of that?

DEAR MRS. CARR: I am very sensitive about several scars on the side of my face. Most people do not see them at first. Still they are there and getting larger. They are pock marks. Is there anything I could cover them with that you may know of? Anything you might tell me would help a lot.

MARG.
I have understood that scars can be removed by a skilled dermatologist. But I should select the physician with great care and discrimination. I do not know of any application that I could recommend.

DEAR MRS. CARR: You have solved so many problems for others I know you can help me a lot.
Is there such a thing as love at first sight? Recently I met a young man who told me he fell in love with me the minute he saw me. He seems to care a lot for me and is rushing me to death. Now, my worry is that if he fell so quickly for me, I am afraid it would be the same way with the other pretty girls. I am a little afraid to trust him with my love.

Now, Mrs. Carr, I'd love to know your opinion of this situation and get your advice. Will be anxiously watching for your reply.

JUNIE.
Tradition has it that there have been cases of love at first sight. I imagine there are a good many cases to prove it, but none that I can just put my hand on right now. That is, while I am sure they exist, it is something like my faith in the fact that the earth is round. I can't exactly point it out to you. And so I think your point may be well taken. I shouldn't rush into being engaged.

DEAR MRS. CARR: Some time ago I read and better in your column from a young married man saying, honestly, that he didn't like children and did not want one in his home. My husband felt the same way. But it is just as you said, now that he has one he feels entirely different about it. Well, our baby arrived absolutely perfect, just a "little bit of Heaven." My husband loves this baby girl more than words can express. He sits and gazes at her with his eyes and puts her to sleep much easier than I. You don't know how happy I am about it. And I do wish all girls' husbands would wait patiently, if they feel as mine did, until the baby comes. Everything will be all right and he will be as mad as a hornet if you even hint that he didn't want it. DEE.

DEAR MRS. CARR: Will you kindly let me know through your column, the name of the screen actress who played opposite Emil Jannings in "The Way of All Flesh," in order to settle an animated discussion. Thanking you in advance.

GRACE A.

Phyllis Haver.

DEAR MRS. CARR: I have been going with a man now for two months and like him a lot. But he talks constantly of his numerous girls and how the girls all fall for him. I just can't get him off the subject. I have already tried talking about my boy friends, but he still keeps squawking about how many girls friends he has. What am I going to do about it? I guess you think this is a silly letter, but honestly, Mrs. Carr, I get so tired of this foolishness I

Schubert Memorial Concerts

How the Committee Provides Audiences for Young American Musicians.

OLGA SAMAROFF.
RUTH FOSSELT, violinist, and Phyllis Graeter, violoncellist, will give a joint recital in St. Louis next season under the sponsorship of the Schubert Memorial Association. This announcement was made last week by Mrs. Olga Samaroff, who has practically abandoned her career as a pianist, in order to prosecute certain educational and propagandist activities with the Juillard Musical Foundation and with the Schubert Memorial, of which she is secretary.

So far so good. But what, precisely, is the Schubert Memorial, one may ask? Mrs. Samaroff is not only ready with a complete answer but invites the question from all and sundry. Apparently too many people think it's a bronze tablet erected to the memory of the Unfinished Symphony. As a matter of fact it memorializes the composer Schubert only in the broad general sense that the glorification of all good music is a tribute to all great musicians.

During her short visit to her old home when she was a guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Hickenlooper, Mrs. Samaroff made the general cultural purpose of the association abundantly clear while discussing the local concert with the local Schubert Memorial Committee.

Its practical aim is to provide audiences for selected young American artists of proved ability. This is necessary because American concert managers will not take a chance with a new artist unless he has a European reputation. Every young American musician knows that and if he has money enough he buys himself a European hearing before trying the American field. But what if he hasn't money enough for that?

"I will tell you what happened to me," said Mrs. Samaroff. "When I had come back to New York after being trained in Europe, I went to a prominent manager and asked him to take me. 'Where are your European press notices?' he asked. 'I have none,' I said. 'Go back and get some,' said he. And that was that. It so happened that the same manager heard me practicing and after listening a while he suggested that I might arrange an appearance with an important orchestra."

It so happened that the same manager heard me practicing and after listening a while he suggested that I might arrange an appearance with an important orchestra."

SUCH a course would naturally not be open to most young musicians, even if it could be substituted, in all cases, for a similar appearance abroad. And as far as the European stamp of approval was concerned, it had no basis in present-day reality.

"Everybody who knows the ropes," said Mrs. Samaroff, "knows that you buy your way through everywhere. I am not referring to the critiques, of course, but I am referring to everything else—apart from the person who has to listen to it. Maybe he has another hobby. See if you can find it. The other man is trying you out. No man really cares for an easy mark."

appearances with the orchestra, the ideas on the applicants is made up of the management and the audience of the conductors of all the first. Moreover, even if one comes by a European reputation honestly, there is nothing in the standard of performance over there that will help him to win an American audience. Economic conditions have in fact given us the advantage. Our recital and with an orchestra, are orchestras are better, our recital artists—many of whom, are, of course, European artists—are better, our schools are becoming more and more of an American audience. But although we are no longer of which St. Louis is one—a spectacular Colonial, we are like it and it was to meet the situation arising out of that Colonial frame of mind that the Schubert Memorial was organized. The function of the organization is, first, to select a few cheaters. In fact, some Schubert young artists who by virtue of their ability deserve a career and secondly, to procure audiences for them wherever possible.

"The first group of three artists were selected arbitrarily by the association without contest in order that we might be certain of setting a high standard to begin with. These artists were Muriel Kerr, pianist, Isabelle Talkovsky, pianist and Sada Schuchart, violinist. They played in St. Louis last year at the concerts arranged by Mrs. Lewis Rumsey and the local committee. Beginning with the second year, however, selections have been made in a nation-wide contest, held in New York, for being a part of the brilliant development in music that is bound to come."

The Schubert Memorial concert in St. Louis will take place in the home of Mrs. Edward Faust during the latter part of November.

Retreat

THERE is one kind of behavior in children which every mother should be quick to recognize as a symptom of trouble and a call for help. This is the tendency to run away from ordinary difficulties and to retreat into solitude and the world of make believe.

The child who fights back when things go wrong may sometimes be difficult to handle. But his tendency is a healthy one, whereas the child who finds happiness in retreat, while he may be ever so docile and obedient, is in an unhealthy frame of mind.

Such a child may become what is known to psychiatrists as a "shut in personality," an individual whom it becomes more and more difficult to help as time goes on. Instead of progressively making adjustments to a more and more exciting world, he escapes more and more into a world of his own phantasies.

The tendency to retreat from reality is thought to be inborn. For this type of child, adjustment to the real world is more difficult than for the action loving, outgoing sort of individual.

The child with a tendency to run away from reality needs special help and understanding. Above all things he needs the love and security which will enable him to bite the bullet and face an unexciting world. It is especially important that the channels of confidence between him and his parents should be kept open.

So long as he speaks freely of the things which occupy his moods and fancies, it is not likely that he will become too real or so completely satisfying as to lead him further and further away from the real world. He needs to be helped to find activities which will bring him actual satisfactions in place of imaginary ones. He needs the wholesome companionship of other children.

Successful Marriage

WHATEVER Neysa McMein takes up, she believes in doing thoroughly and successfully. That is very much evidenced not only in her career as an artist, but in her role as a wife and mother. It accounts for the reason why there have been no storm clouds in her marriage and why her daughter Joan is a lovely, healthy youngster.

"Marriage is the most important life investment," Miss McMein declared, "and it requires one's best thought to make it a success."

She had put aside her paint brush and had seated herself on a low, comfortable davenport. Her studio is a large, colorful place filled with innumerable paintings, photographs, bric-a-brac, musical instruments and a grand piano. In the center of the room was a large easel which displayed the finished portrait of a young woman.

"When I married," continued the famous illustrator, "I made up my mind not to limit my husband's life in any way. He could have all the liberty he wanted. Mr. Baragwanath and I have lived up to this ideal and it has really been the basis of our happy marriage."

"I believe most married people make too many demands on each other. Before you know it, the relationship becomes an irksome one. Let each have some freedom of personality and it will make the wheels of marital life run more smoothly. If, to give a small example, my husband wants to stay at home, while I prefer to go to the opera, I don't nag him into changing his mind. I don't feel that because he is my husband, he must escort me. He can enjoy his evening by the fireside or anywhere he chooses, while I go to the opera."

"I remember that right after our marriage," smiled Miss McMein, "I was asked to go to Europe to do some portrait painting and my husband had to go West to see about his mining engineering interests. People waited expectantly to see the fly. But we each went our way, and when we returned, we had many interesting things to tell each other."

THE woman who has a job, Miss McMein believes, is less apt to have domestic troubles than the one who stays at home with her mind unoccupied.

"The home doesn't provide much of an outlet for a woman these days. She must look elsewhere to satisfy her desire for creative expression or she will become introspective and discontented. A job will help her a great deal."

"The wife who punches the time clock with her husband will be a better companion to him. They each have work to keep them stimulated. If the jobs are entirely different, it makes it still more interesting. For instance, I know artists quite well. My husband brings me a fresh point of view and I am able to glimpse a different world from mine."

Herein is the difference between hazardous self-medication and proper medical treatment. It is easy to purchase from the drugist a headache remedy, but only the physician can make a dependable diagnosis.

And correct diagnosis is the foundation stone of proper treatment.

HEALTH

Brief articles prepared by experts. Edited by Dr. Logan Goldston, for the New York Academy of Medicine.

"Give Me Something"

"WILL you give me something for...?" this, or the other ailment is now an uncommon request for patients to address to their physician.

Not infrequently such a request leaves the doctor staring with amazement. And no wonder!

The request is so simple and so naive. As if the important part in medicine consisted in giving the patient "something" for a headache, for constipation, for that tired feeling or for anything at all. Prescription of drugs is seldom the most important part of medical care.

Diagnosis—that is, determining what abnormal condition, if any, there exists in the patient—must come before prescription.

And even then there is still much left to treatment. There are the environmental factors to be reviewed, to see what bearing they might have on the patient's condition, and also the patient's habits and his personal hygiene.

What is the patient's diet? Does he have enough rest and enough exercise? What is his occupation and how hard does he work at it? What are his mental attitudes?

All of these and many other items must be considered before proper treatment can be established.

Prescribing drugs for the patient is easy, but of little value, except in such specific conditions as malaria or diphtheria.

More important, and in many ways more difficult, is the task of forming a complete picture of the patient, his difficulties and their management.

It is easy to purchase from the drugist a headache remedy, but only the physician can make a dependable diagnosis.

And correct diagnosis is the foundation stone of proper treatment.

CHAPTER IV

NAIDA came to her feet, a love of a big hat. She and Bruce turning from Pat's encircling arm a child, bitterly disappointed and

Before she was dressed and for tea, she had made her resolute she would ask him, as frankly as it no matter what he thought of it—friendship had gone upon the rock of her first quick, comprehensive that it was empty of both himself

She went to Hildreth at once. "Where is Bruce?" she asked with that direct stare of hers, a glance Hildreth had not seen for many weeks.

"They telephoned Naida that she was called back to town on business. Bruce made his excuses and went with her. It was," said Hildreth easily, "rather rude and very obvious of him."

"They were to motor up. Naida has her car with her."

Julie turned away without comment. Hildreth, behind the tea-table, observed the droop of the slim, straight shoulders. She thought, "Poor kid"—but said nothing. After all, it was not her affair. Not yet. Pat Jordan would know how to console Julie. Pat had been clever and patient, Pat was of the herd—Hildreth's herd. It was better so.

Julie was gay that night. And reckless. Pat, catching her by the hand, along in the small hours, drew her into the little, heavily fragrant conservatory.

"I haven't seen you alone all evening."

"Not my fault."

"I got dragged into that bridge game," he told her. "But I thought you'd play at our table."

"I didn't feel like bridge."

"How much did you lose at that silly roulette game?" he wanted to know.

"Oh, not much." She laughed a little. "Does it matter?" she added.

"Of all the foot thunks!" Pat complained. "Hien Gordon and his cigarette-case roulette wheel!"

"We played the game with lights, too," she said defiantly. "You know—how many times they work without missing. I lost $5 on mine. The thing's a silver."

"I'll buy you a new one," he said quickly.

"Green enamel then," she told him. "I saw one at Dunhill's."

"You're lucky if you get one from the corner cigar store," he told her. "I talked to New York today, and some of my investments are coming down like the wolves on the field."

HE was serious, even somber under his careless tone. But Julie wasn't interested. Pat Jordan's investments meant nothing in her young life. She told him so.

"Let's dance," she added.

But he said: "Not now. I've got to find Desmond—I want to talk to him. I haven't been able to get near him all evening."

They knocked him for a row of Russian candlesticks in the roulette game," Julie informed him. "I guess he's gone off somewhere to lick his wounds in silence."

She spun off, disdainful of his detaining hand. Later Pat saw her dancing on the veranda with one of those anonymous boys, who always hung about her. He shook his head thoughtfully, standing near the door. He wasn't keen on the talk he would have to have with Desmond. Lord, how pretty Julie was!

Of course, if he could manage to get rid of Stenpo and for good—his troubles were at an end. And Desmond could shift for himself.

The next morning, wandering down to a late breakfast, the talk with Desmond unaccomplished, he looked for Julie. Hildreth, in the prettiness that look, told him rather blankly:

"She was up before she went to bed, Olga tells me. She's taken her small car and driven into town. She left me a note. She'll be back she says, to dinner."

"Where on earth? What in the world?"

Hildreth made a gesture of despair. "I don't know. I've never been able to keep track of her," she admitted.

JULIE'S first impulse when bathing was changing and looking with a sort of weariness at her untouched bed, she decided to take out the car and leave the house, was an impulse of escape. Anything to get away for a time from the atmosphere of fever and smoke and beating, unsatisfied music, from the high pitched laughter and the low pitched whisper—anything to get away from people—from herself—from the ache of disappointment—from the bitter realization that the tiny duckling, Julie could never become the swan that was Naida Trevor.

She did not realize that the artificial alteration in her, the forced volte face, had appeared genuine to Bruce Stenpo; that it had estranged him, wounded him, he believed, irreparably. CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE.

NAIDA came to her feet, a lovely, peach-tinted woman in a flutter of painted draperies, her eyes serene and smiling under the trim of a big hat. She and Bruce walked off together, and Julie, turning out Pat's encircling arm, watched them with forlornness of a child, bitterly disappointed and close to tears.

Before she was dressed and went downstairs to the living-room for tea, she had made her resolution. She would get Bruce aside; she would ask him, as frankly as she had always asked him things—no matter what he thought of it—why he avoided her, why their old friendship had gone upon the rocks. But having put on her prettiest frock for the occasion and nerved herself, she did not see him. Her first quick, comprehensive glance about the room assured her that it was empty of both himself and Naida Trevor.

She went to Hildreth at once.

"Where is Bruce?" she asked with that direct stare of hers, a glance Hildreth had not seen for many weeks.

"He telephoned Naida that she was called back to town on business. Bruce made his excuses and went with her. It was," said Hildreth easily, "rather rude and very obvious of him."

"But there's no train."

"They were to motor up. Naida has her car with her."

Julie turned away without comment. Hildreth, behind the tea-table, observed the droop of the slim, straight shoulders. She thought, "Poor kid"—but said nothing. After all, it was not her affair. Not yet. Pat Jordan would know how to console Julie. Pat had been clever and patient, Pat was of the herd—Hildreth's herd. It was better so.

Julie was gay that night. And reckless Pat, catching her by the hand, along in the small hours, drew her into the little, heavily curtained conservatory.

"I haven't seen you alone all evening."

"Not my fault."

"I got dragged into that bridge game," he told her. "But I thought you'd play at our table."

"I didn't feel like bridge."

"How much did you lose at that silly roulette game?" he wanted to know.

"Oh, not much." She laughed a little. "Does it matter?" she asked.

"Of all the fool things!" Pat exclaimed. "Hen Gordon and his cigarette-case roulette wheel?"

"We played the game with lights, too," she said defiantly. "You know—how many times they were without missing. I lost six cents. The thing's a flivver."

"I'll buy you a new one," he said quickly.

"Green enamel then," she told him. "I saw one at Dunhill's."

"You're lucky if you get one from the corner cigar store," he told her. "I talked to New York today, and some of my investments are coming down like the wolves on the fold."

He was serious, even somber, under his careless tone. But Julie wasn't interested. Pat Jordan's investments meant nothing in her young life. She told him so.

"Let's dance," she added.

But he said: "Not now. I've got to find Desmond—I want to talk to him. I haven't been able to get near him all evening."

They knocked him for a row of Russian candlesticks in the roulette game. Julie informed him, "I guess he's gone off somewhere to look his wounds in silence."

She spun off, disdainful of his detaining hand. Later Pat saw her dancing on the veranda with one of the innumerable boys who always hung about her. He smoked thoughtfully, standing near the door. He wasn't keen on the talk he would have to have with Desmond. Lord, how pretty Julie was!

Of course, if he could manage to get rid of Stepney—and for good—his troubles were at an end. And Desmond could shift for himself.

The next morning, wandering down to a late breakfast, the talk with Desmond, unaccomplished, he looked for Julie. Hildreth, interpreting that look, told him rather blankly.

"She was up before she went to bed, Olga tells me. She's taken her small car and driven into town. She left me a note. She'll be back, she says, to dinner."

"Where on earth? What in the world?"

Hildreth made a gesture of despair. "I don't know. I've never been able to keep track of her," she admitted.

JULIE'S first impulse when, bathing and changing and looking with a sort of weary keen at her untouched bed, she decided to take out the car and leave the house, was an impulse of escape. Anything to get away from the ache of the aching head, the fever and smoke and beating, unsatisfied music, from the high-pitched laughter and the low-pitched whisper—anything to get away from people—from herself—from the ache of disappointment, from the bitter realization that the ugly duckling she could never become the swan that was Naida Trevor.

She did not realize that the artificial alteration in her, the forced face, had appeared genuine to Bruce Stepney; that it had estranged him, wounded him, he believed, irrevocably. She believed merely that her efforts had been so much waste energy, that his awakened love for Naida occupied all his heart and senses, that his taste them in.

Talkies Shorten Careers of Stars

Blanche Sweet, One of the Early Picture Queens Now in Vaudeville, Discusses Changes That Have Revolutionized the Films—Likes Work on the Stage.

T. AP. Tap.

"Miss Sweet?" questioned the theater attache who had knocked at the dressing room door.

"Yeh-e-e-s. What do you want?"

"Have you time for an interview?"

"Oh, my dear, no. I have scarcely time to makeup before I go on. Only 25 minutes. Can't you wait until after my sketch, and there will be plenty of time."

So Blanche Sweet, movie actress appearing in St. Louis during a summer vaudeville tour of the Eastern states, finished making up under the supervision of her grandmother, Mrs. Blanche C. Alexander, who tours with her, and went on for her sketch.

"I really don't consider this a personal appearance," she explained at a later leisure moment, sitting on a lounge in the dressing room, her chin resting on a long slender hand except when the hand was removed for a brief gesture of emphasis. "I am really in vaudeville, and feel that way, even though it is for the summer only. So far as I know, I haven't decided what I shall do then—perhaps I shall get back into pictures, perhaps I shall remain on the stage."

"It's rather pleasant, and I find it very interesting trying to put the sketch across. You know, there is something of a tendency to depend too much on the fact that one is a moving picture actress whom the audiences come to see on that account, whether the appearance is good or not. But it is very unsatisfying, this summer tour. We just live from week to week, and are never sure of where we will go to see. We expect we will go to some city, and then find that the theater has closed for the summer, and get notice that we are to go somewhere else. After several instances of telling friends we would be in their city and see them shortly, we have given up, and just tell people we may be there."

VERY informal, Miss Sweet was about her interview, and she gave an impression of surprising frankness. No apparent necessity for her volunteering the information that she is 34 years old—unless to allay a suspicion she might be older, in view of her long movie career. But such a suspicion would be improbable, for only the knowledge of that long movie career would lead one to believe she is past—well, say, 25. Clear-skinned, well-poised, blue-eyed, blonde; if she possesses the temperament so frequently attributed to movie actresses she keeps it for the set. Her makeup was nothing more than a touch of rouge and a streak of grease paint below each eye.

"But are movie actresses the only ones who manage to keep looking young? I think that situation is pretty general among women now. For one thing, they wear more attractive clothes, wear them a lot better, and also reflect a more alert spirit. Women have a lot more now to interest them, to keep them active, and they simply do not let themselves get old."

"But I think moving picture actresses have shorter careers now than formerly; or at least do not have as intense a following and a harder time sustaining public interest. It is just my opinion, but I think it is because there is too wide a selection from which to pick favorites. There are many more pictures produced, although individual stars now make only a few each, so that there are more stars."

"And sometimes there is more than one star in the same picture," Grandmother Alexander interjected, "which divides the attraction."

"Yes, that has something to do with it; it's along the same line."

"Sometimes, too, I expect the picture has something to do with it. An actress will be cast in a good picture, well suited to her, and will become very popular. Then the next picture will not be so good and not so well suited, and a good deal of the popularity will be lost."

"I don't know whether I can make a success of pictures again if I decide to continue on the screen instead of the stage. You know, new favorites are always coming along. Some of course, have gone along for years with moderate success, and then enjoyed a really meteoric rise in popularity."

"I have appeared in three talkies, in one of them in the leading part, and in the other two in lesser parts. I am not so sure I like them as well as the stage. When I took the test it gave a horrible feeling to stand in front of the microphone and talk, without really having anyone there to listen. But of course all the movie people were in the same boat, and at first no one knew just what to do."

"I had been out of movies for a year, however. I had left for Europe just as the first talkie was being shown, and when I came back they were in full swing. I didn't expect particularly to take part in them, though it was not so hard for me to change from pantomime to dialogue, since I had had some stage experience."

MISS SWEET has been connected with the theater in some form since a child. Grandmother Alexander was in vaudeville, and Miss Sweet's mother was a dancer. The grandmother raised Miss Sweet, who took part as a child in vaudeville. When but 13 she appeared in the movies, at first as an extra, and while still very young she was given leading parts.

Mrs. Alexander looked after her, and still does, although she will be away for part of the present tour. She had to go back to California to look after her home in Beverly Hills. But she hopes to get it over with and rejoin Miss Sweet before the summer is over.

DAILY STORY FOR CHILDREN

By Mary Graham Bonner

What They Saw

BECAUSE of the Little Black Clock's magical ways with time John and Peggy were now following him through the huge building of the future that was a real city in itself.

In the lower part of the building there were all sorts of shops, a theater and a concert hall. Then they went to another part of the building where there was a school, so that the children did not have to leave the building to attend school.

Built out around this part was an enormous balcony like an enclosed roof, where the children played their games out-of-doors when it was recess time.

Many people had gardens built outside their apartments so they could get the air without going down to the street.

Then on the roof was a very large hangar for planes with a landing platform.

No one had to go out of the building at all unless to take a trip, and it was much more of an event for the children to take a trip along the street than to take off in a plane.

There was even a section of the building where there was a large market where the mothers went to get the food for the household.

"I just feel as though I were living in a dream," Peggy said.

And the Little Black Clock answered: "You're living in the future days to which I've turned the time, you know."

"Why, they even had little cars that run along the very, very long halls," John said. "In fact," he added, "they have everything anyone can think of and a lot more besides that!"

Sound and Healthy

OVER THE RADIO, and in the newspapers, you are constantly hearing of the important part that diet plays in maintaining sound teeth.

One of the simplest ways to assure yourself of sound teeth is through balanced diet. Such a diet should include plenty of milk, together with leafy vegetables.

And calcium is absolutely vital to good teeth. Doctors and dentists tell us that far too many people fail to get a sufficient supply of this essential element. Milk furnishes about four times as much calcium as any other single food.

For children, plenty of milk is imperative. For by the time a child has reached twelve, the permanent teeth have been formed.

Of course, see your dentist twice a year by all means. But give him all the help you can by drinking St. Louis Dairy Perfectly Pasteurized Milk three times a day.

This pure, country milk is backed by a company that has been producing fine milk products for 62 years. Get it from your St. Louis Dairy dealer. Or phone us your order. Central 3900.

A delightful little entrée to the course dinner. Make a rich cream sauce of two tablespoons flour, two tablespoons butter and two cups of milk and cream mixed. Season with salt and cayenne. Stir in one-half pound can each of crab meat, flaked lobster and shrimps. Simmer until thoroughly heated, then stir in two beaten egg yolks. Cook just a minute, remove from fire and the flavor will be much more acceptable than that of lard.

The Greased Pan

Grease cake pans and muffin tins with lard, not butter. Jakes will invariably stick to buttered pans, but never to those well-greased with lard. Butter may be used to grease casserole dishes as the flavor will be much more acceptable than that of lard.

Add a few tablespoons of finely chopped cooked bacon to the left-over chicken and boiled new potatoes and chop all finely together. Season with salt and pepper and add one tablespoon chopped parsley. Brown in butter in the omelet pan, turn and brown the other side. A delicious hash out of leftovers that requires just a small amount of leftover chicken, which is usually about all any of us have.

Now! Her Teeth Are 3 Shades Whiter

Impossible with Ordinary Brushing

Now—you can have gleaming white teeth in just a few days. Science has discovered the way to remove ugly yellow and stain—whiten teeth 3 shades in 3 days! It is called the KOLYNOS Dry-Brush Technique. Try it—use a half-inch of this scientific dental cream on a dry brush twice a day. You'll see a marked change overnight. When KOLYNOS enters the mouth it instantly becomes a refreshing FOAM. This FOAM does the work. First it removes yellow and stain and destroys the millions of mouth-germs—150 million in 15 seconds—then comes most tooth and gum troubles. It stimulates the gums and purifies the mouth. Then it CLEANS TEETH RIGHT DOWN TO THE BEAUTIFUL, NATURAL WHITE ENAMEL WITHOUT INJURY. No ordinary brushing can make teeth so white. No mouthwash can give the mouth a cleaner taste. Why have dull, yellow teeth? Clean them sparkling white and keep them sound and free from decay this way. Start using the KOLYNOS Dry-Brush Technique. Results overnight. Buy a tube of KOLYNOS.

DEAD SET AGAINST

THIS IS AN ALLUSION TO A SETTER DOG THAT HAS DISCOVERED GAME AND MADE A "DEAD SET" AT IT.

"AFTER ME, THE DELUGE!"

WHEN THE FRENCH MINISTERS REMONSTRATED WITH MADAME POMPADOUR BECAUSE OF HER EXTRAVAGANCE, SHE LAUGHED AND COINED THE EXPRESSION—"AFTER ME, THE DELUGE," MEANING—"WHEN I AM GONE RUIN MAY COME FOR AUGHT I CARE!"

THE OSTRICH SLANDER

PLINY, A ROMAN WRITER STARTED THE STORY THAT OSTRICHES BURY THEIR HEADS IN SAND WHEN PURSUED. LATER WRITERS REPEATED THE STORY. THE TRUTH IS THAT OSTRICHES ARE QUITE CLEVER BIRDS AND RUN WHEN PURSUED.

GERMAN LEADERS
WISH TO DISCUSS ECONOMIC CRISIS WITH STIMSON

Want to Take Up Problems in Manner They Did With Britain at Chequers; Look Hopefully to Mel-lon's Visit to Europe.

HAVE TALK WITH U. S. AMBASSADOR

Would Impress American Public of Necessity of Aid to Become Good Customer; Pleased With Senator Borah's Attitude.

By the Associated Press.
S. S. EUROPE, By Radiophone
London, June 9. — Chancellor
Otto Bruning and Dr. Julius Muller, Germany's Foreign Minister, homeward bound from England today, were thinking not only of their week-end conference in Chequers with the heads of the British Government but also of the pending European visits of Secretary Andrew W. Mellon of the United States.

They have let it be known that they would welcome an opportunity to discuss with Col. Stimson the world's economic situation, in the same friendly spirit which permeated the conference at Chequers.
On the other hand, they feel some apprehension lest the American Secretary of State might be pre-occupied with the position of acting as a sort of father-in-law to those ears all Europe pours its ale of woe in the hope that he will remove American public opinion with a view to revision or even cancellation of the war debts.

Downing Street placed a veto on direct quotations in statements to the press by the men who conferred at Chequers, but in conversation with the German statesmen the impression was gained that they realize fully the economic difficulties in the United States which make reparations and war debt revision the two most unpopular subjects imaginable.

They hope that American public opinion, however, may see the connection between reparations and the world economic crisis as the American people come to realize that Germany, economically prostrated, is unable to buy raw materials from the United States.

So far as Europe's relations with the United States are concerned, there is one thing on which the German statesmen are adamant—under no circumstances will they permit Germany to become part of any maneuver for establishing a united European front against America.

If the conference at Chequers was worth anything at all, they intend, it was the full agreement between the British and German representatives that the crisis must be overcome by international collaboration, not the formation of hostile blocs.

Whatever Great Britain and Germany do, they 'ways want to consider the United States as their friend and partner in deciding what course is to be pursued. It may be taken for granted that diplomatic activity regarding reparations will ensue now in London and Berlin.
